It's equal to three sticks of dynamite

Lighters called time bombs

Yarrows has banned disposable lighters and the Victoria Labor Council has asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to take action to have the butane lighters — described as "time bombs" — taken off the market.

The council moved after reports that the lighters — said to have the explosive force of three sticks of dynamite — have caused serious industrial accidents, including the deaths of two railway workers in the U.S.

Three claims for lighter-related injuries were filed with the Workers' Compensation Board in B.C. last year.

Labor council secretary-treasurer Jack Groves said a letter was sent two weeks ago to the federation's health and safety committee asking it to pressure manufacturers and the government to stop the sale of such lighters.

A spokesman for Yarrows shipyard in Victoria says in addition to the ban, workers have been alerted to the danger of carrying them.

In Kitimat, Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. has also banned the lighters on its premises following an accident in which a worker carrying a lighter was splashed with molten aluminum.

A drop of the hot metal landed on the plastic lighter, burned through, and caused an explosion which added to the worker's burns.

Fire department spokesman said there have been cases reported across Canada of young people throwing the lighters against walls in experiments to make them explode.

In Ottawa today the consumer affairs department said it passed regulations last year providing safety performance standards that would eliminate problems with malfunctioning lighters — disposable or not.

The department said it has no plans to ban the sale of the lighters and believes the regulations which will become effective in November will improve the situation.

The department has studied the problem, said a spokesman, and has learned that a damaged valve can prevent the lighter from self-extinguishing.

Heat can build which in turn can damage the lighter case, possibly causing it to explode.

The department recommends that the lighters not be taken into places involving welding or work with hot metals.

Groves said any industry that has open flames or sparks could create potentially dangerous conditions.

The safety of disposable lighters has recently come under scrutiny by safety agencies in North America.

Allan Scott of Bic, whose company distributes some 30 million disposable lighters annually in Canada, said simulated welding accidents were part of the company's testing.

Last year Bic commissioned private laboratory tests on its lighters. They were placed on a 600-watt electric element and the power turned on. The fastest explosion was 1 minute, 46 seconds.

Scott said that over the past four years Bic has settled several consumer claims, but none for lighters that actually exploded.

An industry spokesman said the big three in disposable lighters — Bic, Gillette and Ronson — all meet the stringent federal standards that went into operation last year.

But there is some concern about foreign-made inferior imports that have been dumped on the Canadian market.

Solution near for hostages

Rogers orders steelhead ban

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers today slapped a ban on the taking of all wild steelhead in Vancouver Island streams.

Effective immediately and until March 31, any that are caught must be returned unharmed to the stream.

The move is being made to conserve critically low numbers of early-returning steelhead, Rogers said.

Counts of wild steelhead and catch surveys reveal that the number of potential spawners is far less than required for proper seeding of spawning and rearing areas, he said.

The regulation does not apply to hatchery steelhead which are identified by a missing adipose fin and healed scar.

Hatchery steelhead are present in the Big Qualicum, Campbell and Quinsam Rivers and to a lesser extent in the Little Qualicum, Stamp and Salmon Rivers.

Rogers said the population of wild steelhead was reduced because of severe floods in the fall and winter of 1975-76 which led to poor fingerling and fry survival and subsequent low adult population this winter.

Washington State is also experiencing poor returns of wild steelhead to most of their rivers and the same causes are suspected

The United States and Iran are nearing a "face-saving" agreement that would lead to freeing the 50 American hostages held for 96 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, a Kuwaiti newspaper said today.

"The first step toward a settlement will be the establishment of an international commission to look into the crimes of the ousted shah," the newspaper Al Anba said. "Once the commission finishes its report, the hostages will be handed over to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and the United States will lift its sanctions against Iran."

In Washington, the state department said today it has shelved plans to impose formal economic sanctions on Iran in hopes of speeding a diplomatic solution to the hostage situation.

"The (U.S.) administration is holding the sanctions regulations in abeyance while diplomatic activities continue," department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

"We don't want to take the formal steps toward the sanctions if the crisis can be solved by these means."

The decision, he added, is "aimed, we hope, at enhancing our diplomatic activities."

Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher described the situation surrounding the hostages as "somewhat promising." He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, Iran's Foreign Ministry, contacted by telephone from London, confirmed that Information Minister Nasser Minachi, jailed Wednesday, was freed from custody early today.

Minachi's release followed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's open confrontation with Moslem militants whose charges against Minachi led to his arrest. The president accused the militants for acting like "children who don't know what they are doing."

The ruling Revolutionary Council, stung by the unauthorized arrest of Minachi by revolutionary guards following an inflamatory broadcast by the Moslem militants, has ordered Iran's state-owned radio and television network not to allow the militants any further air time to broadcast allegations stemming from documents purportedly found in the U.S. embassy.

Meanwhile, Panama's foreign minister says the shah cannot leave Panama and that he is living in the country "as if it were a jail," but the Panamanian president said the exiled monarch is free to leave under certain conditions.

The statements by Foreign Minister Carlos Ozores and President Aristedes Royo in separate television interviews Wednesday were the latest in a series of confusing statements issued by Panamanian authorities on the status of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

CREAM-PIE CAPER zeroed in on noted physicist Dr. Edward Teller during lecture engagement at UCLA in Los Angeles Wednesday night. Attacker was unidentified, and police hustled him away before his motive could be determined. Dr. Teller, who helped develop the atomic bomb, was speaking on nuclear energy.

Only $3 barrel oil hike: Pierre

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau says he'll keep the wellhead oil price increase under $3 a barrel this year if elected prime minister in the Feb. 18 election.

Trudeau's comment, in a CFTO-TV interview taped for broadcast Wednesday night, is the closest the former prime minister has come to being specific about oil prices since he first proposed a made-in-Canada price system at the start of the campaign.

Pressed for details, Trudeau proposed later in the campaign a price-blend formula based on the different oil source levels in consultation with the provinces.

Prime Minister Clark had negotiated a total $4-a-barrel increase for 1980 before his Conservative government was toppled Dec. 13.

The price increase that would be negotiated by the Liberals would "mean that either the people of Alberta or the multinationals or somebody will be getting less windfall profits," Trudeau said in the television interview.

There is no reason why Canadians should buy their own oil at prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Trudeau added.

Moderate OPEC countries, such as Saudi Arabia, are charging $26 a barrel.

Canadian oil has reached $14.75 a barrel.

Denticare getting brush-off?

The government promise to have a provincial denticare program in place by this spring is fading.

"It's obviously the opinion of the government that this particular year is not the year we can afford to start an ongoing, very expensive program," Health Minister Rafe Mair said.

Mair's comment follows a statement by Premier Bill Bennett earlier this week that "our goals are not always attainable as quickly as we want."

Mair indicated the denticare plan is now complete.

"As a health minister my job is to get a program ready to go, and that's done."

But whether that program is put into effect is up to the ministry of finance and the treasury board, he said.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has refused to comment on why the government would delay denticare when he reported this week a third-quarter interim budgetary surplus of $303.9 million.

He told reporters to wait for his new budget March 10.

Tremor hits Okanagan

An earthquake measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale struck the south Okanagan Wednesday night, a spokesman for the Pacific Geoscience Centre in Victoria said today.

The tremor shook the area for about 30 seconds. No injuries were reported and damage was minimal.

London rife with buggings

LONDON (AP) — British secret services bugged the telephones of foreign embassies in London "including the Americans," a British weekly news magazine reported today.

The liberal weekly New Statesman first blew the whistle on the operation last week, in an article written by 27-year-old telecommunications expert Duncan Campbell.

"The major targets of the British bug teams appear to be political," Campbell wrote in the second installment today.

Campbell quoted an unidentified former British intelligence official who worked at one of the London phone-tapping centres as describing the targets as:

"Embassies, all of them . . . including the Americans. . . . Trade union leaders and offices, all the time; journalists, not very many, we've got enough information from inside. . . . Shipping companies, they're a very valuable source of information; a few MPs . . . ."

Campbell did not say if the embassy bugging is still going on.

However, he claimed U.S. intelligence agents bugged "critical meetings" during last year's conference of non-aligned countries in Havana, Cuba, and passed the information to Britain through a link with the U.S. National Security Agency.

"On her visit to Washington (last month), (Prime Minister Margaret) Thatcher made a particular point of thanking President Carter for this technical assistance," Campbell said.

The government has acknowledged it eavesdropped for national security reasons but has not given any details. It also has denied that the phones of members of Parliament were tapped.

The latest article backed up a report in The Sunday Times that British security services conducted a "massive intelligence attack" last autumn on Patriotic Front guerrilla delegates to the Rhodesian peace talks in London.

No draft dodger haven, says Flora

REGINA (UPC) — Canada will not become "a haven for draft dodgers" from the United States again, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said here Wednesday.

She was replying on a radio talk show to the question of what Canada would do if the United States begins drafting men — and perhaps women — because of the increasingly hot Cold War.

An estimated 50,000 to 100,000 young American men, fleeing military service, came to Canada during the late 1960s and early 1970s while the United States waged the Vietnam war.

Although many returned to the United States when President Jimmy Carter declared an amnesty for draft dodgers early in his term, thousands stayed and became Canadian citizens.

But Miss MacDonald said: "I don't see Canada harboring draft dodgers. I just don't see at this point that we would suddenly turn ourselves into a haven for draft dodgers."

Canada, although a member of U.S.-led military alliances such as NATO and Norad, maintained a largely neutral policy during the Vietnam war under successive Liberal administrations. Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau was prime minister from 1968 through the end of the war.

But since the election of Prime Minister Joe Clark's Progressive Conservatives last year, the government has responded to the Iran and Afghanistan crises by taking an increasingly hawkish stand towards the Soviet Union.

Miss MacDonald said the government had not developed firm plans for closing the border to U.S. draft evaders.

"I don't know what steps could be taken, I just haven't given any detailed thought to it," she said. "But I don't see us encouraging people to avoid their responsibilities to their own country."

The Canadian government followed the American lead in limiting trade with the Soviet Union and supporting Carter's call for an Olympic boycott in the wake of the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

Miss MacDonald said Wednesday that Canada would be prepared to play a further role in the Middle East if a major conflict develops there.

"If there is any kind of a call on Canada, we'll be there," she said. "I don't mean we will go out and engage in military action, but in other ways."

Lost cash brought on theft: employee

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 38-year-old Vancouver man told a provincial court judge Wednesday that he had hoped a gambling spree with $7,000 taken from his employer would help repay a $7,200 debt.

Andre Gagne pleaded guilty to the theft of $15,000 from his former employer, the Blue Boy Motor Hotel.

Gagne said as part of his job every week, he converted $15,000 in small denominations into $100 bills at a nearby bank. but discovered $7,200 missing on the Jan. 3 bank trip.

He said he flew to Calgary and, later, Las Vegas in an abortive bid to win the lost money back with the remaining $7,800.

Drug giant guilty of Valium deals

TORONTO (UPC) — Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd., Swiss-based and one of the world's largest pharmaceutical firms, was convicted in Ontario Supreme Court of illegal pricing in its sales of Valium.

The indictment and conviction covers the period 1968 to 1974 when Roche, as it is also known, was said to have lessened competition by giving away the tranquilizer, which made the company an "extraordinarily profitable operation".

In his 112-page judgment released Wednesday, Justice Allen Linden of the Ontario Supreme Court, convicted Roche of trying to reduce or eliminate competition by selling Valium — described as one of the most successful drugs ever developed — at unreasonably low prices.

The judge acquitted the company on a second charge of lessening competition in the sales of Librium.

The charges stemmed from a court action brought by the federal Attorney General's office based on legislation in the Combines Investigations Act which makes it illegal to sell at unreasonably low prices if the effect is to lessen or eliminate competition.

Justice Linden described the two tranquilizers as "among the most successful drug products ever developed by anyone in history of the pharmaceutical industry."

In 1970, Valium became the second-most prescribed drug in Canada after oral contraceptives.

The judge noted that by virtue of its patents and being first on the market, sales of the pair of drugs meant an "extraordinarily profitable operation for the defendant company."

Roche became the "leading ethical pharmaceutical company in Canada," the judge said, but in 1969 competitors began making inroads into the market because of government programs aimed at reducing the prices.

For example, he said in 1970 the company began a six-month policy of giving hospitals one free capsule for every two sold. This program was extended.

The result was that Roche gave away 82 million pills with a market value of $2.6 million, said the judge. Between January, 1970, and September, 1974, the company gave away 174 million units of Valium and 26 million units of Librium.

CP Rail worker told to clam up: witness

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A Peel Regional Police constable, testifying Wednesday at the royal commission investigating the November derailment of a chemical-laden CP Rail train, said he overheard a CP Rail official tell a co-worker "not to say too much" about a piece of one of the cars found the night of the derailment.

Elliot McConnell, whose property borders the tracks, said he first saw the object — part of a rail car's wheel assembly called a journal stub — while he was running from his house to the scene of derailment. It was still sitting on the rail bed but was too hot to pick up, he said.

McConnell testified he brought two rail officials to the still-glowing stub.

The constable said neither man gave his name but one identified himself as CP Rail's "Toronto-area supervisor."

McConnell testified he overheard the supervisor say to the other man: "Don't say too much about this on the radio."

Under cross-examination by Norman Chalmers, CP Rail's head lawyer, McConnell said that on the night he found the stub, he did not know its function.

Early evidence showed that a journal stub is part of a larger device called a journal box. The journal box supports the rail car's load on its wheels. The stub acts as an axle to the wheel.

In the days following the accident, CP Rail said the cause of the derailment that forced 225,000 residents out of their homes was a hot box — a term used to describe a journal box that has overheated because of a lack of lubrication.

Seattle tightens gun laws

SEATTLE (UPI) — An ordinance making it illegal to carry pistols in Seattle — whether concealed or not — without a police permit has been signed into law by Mayor Charles Royer.

The ordinance also makes it illegal to carry a knife with a blade more than 3½ inches long, or to carry "chako sticks" and "throwing stars" unless using those devices in connection with a legitimate martial arts course, said Hugh Spitzer, legal advisor for the mayor.

Water ruled out as cause of death

TORONTO (CP) — Contaminated water has been ruled out as the cause of death of Laura Shapero, a 28-year-old Toronto woman who died after returning from a week's vacation in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico.

Coroner Dr. Margaret Milton said Wednesday that "at the moment there is no evidence at all that her death was linked to contaminated water." She estimated it would take up to six weeks to determine the cause of death.

Dr. Milton's statement came as a relief to 36 other Toronto residents who visited the resort the same week as the Shaperos. The dead woman's husband, Richard Shapero, 29, had said he suspected his wife had died as a result of bottled drinking water supplied by the hotel where they had stayed.

Lice fear spreads, workers pull out

KITSAULT (CP) — More than 60 workers left the remote Amax mining camp Wednesday as fear spread about a possible outbreak of scabies.

Some of the 300 construction workers at the camp site about 160 kilmometres north of Prince Rupert in northwest British Columbia were on the job, said Fred Meyer, camp construction manager.

Many of the union members refused to work, beginning Tuesday. They are plumbers, pipefitters and carpenters employed by Commonwealth Construction, contractors for the work at the Amax Northwest Mining Co. Ltd. molybdenum site.

Many of the workers, said union officials, have become irritated over efforts by the company to end an itching problem which apparently has afflicted several of the workers.

Those who left did so in small, chartered aircraft as hostilities grew in the troubled camp.

A Prince Rupert doctor will visit this remote mine site again today to check complaining workers for skin infections, a spokesman for Amax said.

Dr. David Scruton flew here Tuesday and checked five men for scabies, a contagious skin disease caused by mites. Scruton said he found no evidence of the disease.

The company spokesman said Scruton and a health nurse will visit the site again as union protests mount over health conditions.

UFAW may take loggers to court

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union wants to move the battle of fisheries against forestry in the Riley Creek watershed out of the Queen Charlotte Islands and into the courts.

The union's annual convention voted Wednesday to "take appropriate legal action under the federal Fisheries Act" against the logging company that logged the Riley Creek watershed and the provincial government because it approved the cutting.

The union also plans to charge the federal fisheries department "which failed to prosecute the company."

Queen Charlotte Timber, a subsidiary of Japan's C. Itoh Ltd., is the company which received a provincial forestry permit to log the Riley Creek watershed.

Thirteen mudslides into the watershed, which damaged salmon fisheries in the Rennell Sound area, were attributed by Environment Minister Stephen Rogers in December to logging practices permitted by Forestry Minister Tom Waterland.

Federal fisheries officers laid charges against 15 loggers and an official of Q. C. Timber Ltd. but the charges were dropped after Premier Bill Bennett wired a strong protest to then-fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc.

Bribery case verdict reserved to March 6

VANCOUVER (CP) — County court Judge Lee Skipp has reserved decision to March 6 in the trial of former broadcaster Ed Murphy and businessman Douglas Holme, charged with conspiracy to offer a bribe to former environment minister Jim Nielsen.

In his closing argument Wednesday, prosecutor John Hall said the Crown's case is fully supported by wiretap evidence in which the two men discussed a $100,000 payout.

Hall asked the judge to reject a defence argument that the discussions were misinterpreted by the Crown and to find that the words used were consistent with the charge that the men had an agreement to approach the minister with a bribe.

"There is no evidence that Nielsen is anything but a high-principled public servant," said Hall, noting that the bribe was never made to him.

On Tuesday, Murphy's lawyer advised the court that his client is prepared to adopt Holme's defence to a conspiracy charge, provided it remains afloat.

"But if that one sinks, then I move to the issue in the case which affects my client," Leonard Doust told the court.

The defence lawyer said the secondary issue is whether Murphy, even if Holme did suggest bribing a cabinet minister, actually agreed to participate in a bribery proposal.

In his closing arguments, he said that Murphy was so "captivated and seduced by the prospect of millions" that he failed to realize Holme may have been suggesting they offer the minister a bribe.

Nielsen, now minister of consumer and corporate affairs, has testified that he had no contact with either of the accused and was never offered a bribe.

Doust asked the judge first to consider Holme's defence and if he found it reasonable and plausible, to acquit both men without considering Murphy's role in the alleged conspiracy.

Holme's defence amounts to a denial he ever suggested or discussed offering Nielsen a bribe and an argument that the Crown misinterpreted his wiretapped phone conversation with Murphy.

Even Pierre succumbs to the sillies

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. — There must be something in the air around here that infects politicians and does funny things to their imaginations.

It's the closest spot to a shrine in Canadian politics, as we know, being the home of John Diefenbaker who used to use facts as a vague base before soaring off into flights of fancy that couldn't be captured with a butterfly net.

It also proudly claims two other prime ministers who once represented the riding: Mackenzie King and Sir Wilfred Laurier in the days when the laws allowed unpopular politicians great flexibility in discovering a compatible electorate.

One would think the Jesuiticly icy Pierre Trudeau would be the last to succumb to the local disease, whatever it is, but there he was, up on his hind legs on a school stage spouting goofy partisan nonsense in the great tradition of some of Dief's wilder moments.

He not only claimed The Chief as a Liberal, but played shamelessly on local pride, like some apprentice ward-healer, suggesting with a straight face that the ever-striving Liberal candidate, one Clyne Harradence, might be the fourth prime minister from Prince Albert.

As Senator Davey Stuart told the crowd, "I haven't seen so much fun since the night in 1952 when they tried to burn down the penitentiary."

It is not to suggest that Prince Albert takes politics seriously, but one sign outside the school read: "Why Change Now? Vote Diefenbaker."

There is nothing so serious as Harradence. A speaker of stupefying pomposity, he is a prominent Anglican church layman and former bencher with the Law Society of Saskatchewan.

He was one of the last lawyers to article with Diefenbaker in criminal law nearly 30 years ago.

His terrifying platform style, fixing his audience with an accusatory Old Testament eye, is something left over from William Jennings Bryan. So ponderous is his delivery that he makes Joe Clark look like a stand-up comedian.

Harradence appointed himself to a future Liberal cabinet, assuring listeners that all they had to do was "get me elected." Trudeau would do the rest.

Trudeau, instead of shucking off such impertinence like lint from his Italian-made suit as he usually does, dropped down and absolutely wallowed in the down-home hokery.

He played hard on the theme of Prince Albert being the spawning nest of three prime ministers.

(In explaining the phenomenon, Dief himself used to say that, with the common jail, the women's jail and the federal penetentiary, "ladies and gentlemen, there are more men and women of conviction in Prince Albert than in any place in Canada."

Mr. Trudeau, apparently infected by the same sense of humor, lauded the ponderous Harradence and suggested that if the wise voters of Prince Albert elected him, the town might have "a fourth prime minister."

The vibrations of the "Clyne Harradence for PM" movement could be seen emanating from the auditorium as various and vicious Liberals throughout the land smote their foreheads with disappointment.

If Mr. Harradence is going to make it he'd better hurry, since he's already 54 and finished dead last behind the NDP's Stan Hovdebo, in the November by-election to replace The Chief.

Trudeau, by now clearly ingesting heady air, told a strange story of sleeping with Diefenbaker on an armed forces flight to London and shouted that, because of Joe Clark, if John Diefenbaker were alive today he'd be standing on this here platform as a Liberal.

At this, one Quebec reporter rolled his eyes and pantomimed an injection in the vein while another simulated a man smoking a strange substance.

This is all rather interesting, since Mr. Trudeau in successive interviews has been edging away from the pledge to return only briefly to save his party from the fate that awaited it if it had not had the fortune of his return.

He has, in the past week, talked about staying a "full term" and then extended that to "five years." To Patrick Watson he said he wouldn't fight a "second election" but then to David Halton's query about another minority government necessitating another election in 18 months, he wouldn't "speculate on the hypothesis."

All he will say is that he will ask the party to call a leadership convention. Well, so did Dief, who was then a candidate in that convention.

Perhaps Mr. Trudeau plans to wait until the new threat, Clyne Harradence, is ready for the throne.

Land deal hearing may move

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Five men charged with more than 50 counts of conspiracy, fraud and false pretences in a land deal in the Cayman Islands will have the location of their preliminary hearing set March 19.

David Allison, Gerhard Nargang and James Williams, all of Kelowna, John Allison of Edmonton and Glen Kemp of Victoria are charged.

The Crown wants the case heard in Kamloops; the defence wants it in Vancouver, because most defence witnesses are from the Vancouver area.

Operation suspended by B.C. ballet troupe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Ballet Theatre, British Columbia's only professional ballet company, officially suspended operations Tuesday.

The move followed a meeting Monday at which company artistic director Maria Lewis quit and company administrator John Holland gave notice he would be quitting in April.

"We simply ran into an acute shortage of money," said Elaine Willis, chairman of the board of directors. "When you can't pay the payroll, you don't have any option but to close down."

She stressed the 10-member company, which specializes in ballets in both classical and contemporary styles, has not closed permanently.

"We're abridging the current season, because if we went on, the deficit would become so large that we wouldn't be able to start next season."

An anticipated Canada Council grant of between $7,000 and $10,000 never materialized, several major donors cut off support this year and revenue from a recent Vancouver Island tour was less than anticipated.

No effects from PCB contact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twelve men who came in contact with a leaking transformer containing toxic polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) last month suffered no ill effects, a spokesman for provincial Environment Minister Stephen Rogers said Wednesday.

Rogers said in a news release it is not his intention to downplay the impact of PCB spills, "but I do feel it is important not to create any alarm."

A little propaganda

Revenue-sharing is a first-rate program the government started three years ago. Under it, munici-share in any growth in the provincial economy and revenue through a predetermined formula. This year, with government revenues much higher than anticipated, the municipalities are entitled to a hefty increase.

The Social Credit government, however, has decided it isn't getting enough credit. Last week, the cabinet passed a regulation — an order having the force of law — requiring all municipalities to inform their taxpayers about the Social Credit largesse.

The municipalities must print on their tax notices — in boldface type or a contrasting color, — a paragraph stating: "Last year without provincial government revenue sharing, your general municipal taxes would have increased by (blank space) per cent to provide similar levels of service."

Just what the provincial government would do if a municipality declined to reprint all its tax notice forms with this bonus information is not made clear. Would the government then try to withhold the revenue-sharing payments?

It's evident that the government is trying in a heavy-handed way to give itself a public pat on the back.

What is less evident is whether it will do the slightest bit of good. Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm says the point of the notice is to help B.C. citizens understand the revenue-sharing system. However, it's unlikely that the average citizen is really going to gain much understanding of the program from such an unexplained statement. If the government is very lucky, the taxpayers may gain a vague impression that Social Credit has some plan, without which they would have to pay even more taxes than they do now.

Moreover, the average citizen receiving his tax notice may not be in the mood for technical explanations. He may be just plain mad, if the brightly colored paragraph reminds him that the province has a $300 million surplus.

Vander Zalm agrees that the printed paragraphs are "propaganda of a sort." He and his colleagues should also agree that it is the kind of propaganda that they — and the voters — can do without.

Recycled energy

The push for energy conservation has concentrated on using less of what we have. Such measures as improved home insulation and switching to smaller cars are obvious means by which the average person can contribute.

Another aspect of conservation is using what we have in the most efficient manner. And one of the things we have in abundance is garbage.

Many people likely don't think of recycling as an activity that in a small way eases society's ravenous consumption of natural resources. But it also makes a startling contribution to energy conservation.

This week Saanich Municipal council took under consideration a report from its Citizen's Task Force on Recycling. Prepared by an ambitious group of volunteers, the document outlined the difference in the energy consumed to make products from the raw resource, and the energy needed to recycle waste into those orginial products.

For newsprint, the energy saving is in the magnitude of 34 per cent. For tin and steel — 60 per cent, aluminum — 95 per cent, glass — 60 per cent and copper — 69 per cent.

Last year residents in the Capital Regional district bundled newspaper, cleaned bottles and crushed tin cans to the tune of 1,100, 400 and 80 tons respectively. Considering the amount effort needed first to collect and then deliver the used materials to one of eight recycling depots in the region, residents are paying much more than lip service to recycling.

A good point made by the task force was that if respectable resident participation can be achieved with a somewhat inconvenient depot system, then likely more people would get involved if the municipality initiated a curbside pick-up. In addition, the task force believes that curbside pick-up of tin, newspaper and glass is reaching the point where re-sale value of the goods will pay for the service.

But solid wastes are not the only reuseable materials. The Capital Regional District has found that about 33 per cent of garbage is wet paper, vegetable peelings and other organic materials. The task force has suggested council investigate setting up a municipal compost system.

The group says that the recycled garbage could be used on lawns and boulevards or sold to citizens for their gardens. Thousands of tons of sewage-garbage compost from Milwaukee and Los Angeles are now imported into this region, they say.

Without cost benefit studies, it is difficult for Saanich to know just how far it should get involved in recycling. But the report from its task force does point out that recycling, on an individual or mass scale, makes a worthy contribution to energy, as well as other forms of conservation.

CLAUDE ADAMS

Was the FBI shown how?

WASHINGTON — The disclosures this week that FBI men in sheik's clothing may have "bribed" nine U.S. congressmen in a classic caper of high-level entrapment has sent shock waves through government circles here.

Yet amid all the hand-wringing on Capitol Hill, one small question has been overlooked: What devious mind in the Federal Bureau of Investigation came up with the idea for a mythical sheik Kamir Abdul Rahman who would offer money for services rendered?

Nobody knows for sure, but there's a good chance the scheme was hatched by an FBI agent who was a casual reader of The National Enquirer, the country's biggest and most successful tattle sheet.

Madcap idea

Back in November, 1977, an Enquirer reporter named Brian Hogan had a madcap idea for a story to illustrate official Washington's obsession with oil-rich Arab potentates.

Hogan suited up in an Arab robe and head-dress, printed a handful of calling cards identifying himself as sheik Ongha Biran from the Persian Gulf state of "Halat Al-Bhudi," and paid an impromptu visit to senate offices here.

Arriving at the Rayburn office building in a rented powder-blue Cadillac, and accompanied by a colleague posing as an interpreter, the bogus sheik got the red carpet treatment. The politicians tripped over themselves to glad-hand their illustrious visitor.

James Abourezk, a former senator and the only Arab on Capitol Hill, was the first victim. In his enthusiasm, he even agreed to tape a message of greeting to the 2,400 residents of Halat Al-Bhudi.

Other senators shook his hand, posed for photographs, and regretted that the reticent sheik had only one day to spend in Washington. Senator Harry Bellmon, curious about American links with the small sheikdom, was assured by the interpreter that the relationship was "very firm."

Sheik Biran made a quick getaway when the questions became more pointed.

Justice department officials have no comment about the origins of the sensational "sting" operation that was unveiled this week, except to say that the idea was conceived two years ago — just after The Enquirer article appeared.

This latest caper, with its far more serious implications, had its own bizarre touches. The FBI "sting" team rented a house from a prominent Washington reporter, who was himself hoodwinked for two years. The house was rented by an agent posing as a construction company executive who made extensive renovations and even billed his landlord for part of the costs.

Transactions filmed

The FBI men offered money to the congressmen in return for legislative help with fictitious financial dealings. Negotiations were secretly filmed on videotape.

When the story was blown this week, the use of a phoney Arab sheik as a front man brought howls of protest from Arab-American groups. Attorney-General Benjamin Civiletti said straight-faced that the FBI was not casting any reflection on Arabs, any more than on truck drivers and stockbrokers whom they have used as "ruses" in similar crime-busting operations in the past.

President Carter, meanwhile, insisted that the only thing he knew about the FBI caper was what he had read in the newspapers.

Oil routes

In response to the Northern Tier oil issue, I would just like to give the people in this area a little reality on what is going on up North.

I am totally against all of the proposed routes for the oil to cross the Pacific Northwest, and/or Canada. Supertankers and oil spills in the Strait of Juan de Fuca would be an absolute tragedy.

Any plans for pipelines in this area should also be rejected. I spent three months travelling in Alaska shortly after the pipeline there was put into operation. I saw what the oil companies did to a beautiful little fishing village, Valdez, by putting in their storage tanks and loading docks. Valdez sits at the innermost end of an inlet off Prince William's Sound and is surrounded by high snow-capped peaks which seem to rise out of the water. In order to get the supertankers and storage tanks in there, they had to completely wipe out a vast area along the sides of those mountains, leaving a very ugly scar on the land.

They also had moved in hundreds of mobile homes to house the workers who were building that end of the project. When those people left, these mobile homes were left behind to rust away along with the bulldozers and other large pieces of equipment which the oil companies said would be too costly to remove.

Moving northward along the pipeline, one cannot forget its existance as you continually see the huge silver snake winding its way across mountains, plains, rivers and streams. The herds of caribou, moose and other wildlife refused to cross it on their centuries-old routes of migration.

The reaction of the Alaskans to the project at that time was very poor. They were angry at the destruction that the oil companies had left behind. They had also been promised that the pipeline would incrase the abundance, but in reality, much of the money simply was made by non-Alaskans and left the state when the workers did. Inflation skyrocketed for all, and yet all were not making big money.

Some good did come out of it, as a few highways were improved, taxes collected, and some of the money did go to the natives who really deserved it, but I don't feel that it was anywhere near enough for what the land, the people and the wildlife were left with and suffered.

I don't wish to see what happened to Valdez happen to Port Angeles (in clear view of Victoria!), and I also don't wish to see what happened to Alaska happen to the Yukon and B.C.

If the Americans want their Alaska oil, make them build their pipeline across California where it can't possible harm Canada. They certainly can't harm Los Angeles much more than they already have, not to mention that they already have faciities for supertankers there. Then let's find a better way to get Canadian oil to Canadian refineries! — Shirley Thornton, 305-1435 Elford Street.

Help needed

I am a Roman Catholic priest in charge of a leper colony named Sacred Love Village where 103 negative-case leprosy patients and 86 non-infected children of theirs in 40 families live. These people are so very helpless and forlorn, and their life is a hard struggle to maintain bare existence. These are truly God's poorest of the poor for whom life has been totally ruined because of Hansen's disease.

And yet, they are such fine people they would very seldom give themselves up to despair since they have their own darling children, their only precious hope of tomorrow.

Yet the children cannot go to ordinary school because of the strong protest of its pupils and their parents. In the colony we have at present 38 school children aged 7 to 14, and a small isolated branch school of only two classrooms. The children are the pitiable ones, growing always with inferiority complexes in gloominess. So, since last year, a voluntary teacher, a newcomer, has started to teach the children a special sport, Taegwon-Do, through which they could develop their physical strength and could also cultivate a sense of pride enough to grow up sound. As the result, you can never imagine how much they do love it with such very happy and bright faces everywhere. The progress of training has been quite admirable.

But the trouble for them is that they do not have any proper training facilities except an open mattress room in the corner of the playground. In case of rainfall, they have had to stop their training. They cannot practise at all in the winter because of the severe cold. The pitiable kids' only cherished dream is a small indoor gym, and they have been badly teasing me to build one. And then, how could I refuse them?

Therefore, their parents and I have decided to build a small gym available for their training of Taegwon-Do, and all other necessary indoor physical training, coming out a plan of the building fund for $3,783. We have up to date raised funds of $1,215 — on deposit from one source or another, including even what we had put aside for an emergency. But we have now no more sources to make up the huge balance.

It is for this reason I have decided to write you with an earnest prayer and hope that you may be able to do something for them as the pen is mightier than the sword. Kindly, afford us, if any possible, the hospitality for the God's poorest of the poor. — Rev. Matthew Heo, Director, Sacred Love Village, P.O. Box 10, Hamyang, Kyongnam, Korea.

USC thanks

The eagerly awaited, very happy moment has arrived when I can send our deep USC thank-you's to all the readers of your Victoria Times, for having once more so splendidly supported our latest Christmas appeal. This beautiful tradition began in the early 1950s and for countless readers of the Times, it has become an important part of their own Christmas celebrations — to share their bounty with hungry children and often ill and very elderly adults half around the world.

To all who have readily shared their own blessings with faraway, unknown friends, by contributing to your pre-Christmas appeal, I am sending our deep gratitude and the pledge that we shall stretch every Friendship Dollar as far as we can, to create new hope and practical help overseas. The final total of the 1979 USC Victoria Times campaign stands at $34,026.68. — Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, Executive Director, Unitarian Services Committee of Canada.

Last chance

Are you worried about this election? I am. Oh, it isn't all the wild promises that are being thrown about or the personal turn the campaign is taking. Neither is it the hopeless scene on TV where we are asked to accept as gospel the news that party leader "A" is no good because party leader "B" says so, following which party leader "C" ups and declares that both the others are hopeless.

True, this saddens and annoys me but I realize it merely means that the publicity departments of all the parties have been hoodwinked into believing that you have to sell politics like soap flakes. Sensible content is the last thing to serve 'em — that might start them thinking and before you know it they will turn off the set.

No, the thing that has me worried is the fact that unless the thinking, uncommitted voter that makes up the majority of the electorate really does consider the alternatives very carefully and then makes a wise decision, we may never again have a Canadian government that will put the country's interest ahead of political gain, for it will have been spelled out loud and clear that the public will support a party that will only introduce those motions that will keep it in power rather than take the actions really needed and the best way to get elected is to make promises aimed at pleasing the large voting blocks, regardless of the honesty or feasibility of the pledges.

During the brief period that they were in office, the Progressive Conservatives showed that they believed in the principle of honest government whatever the political cost, and when it came to a showdown, refused to compromise these beliefs in order to make deals that would keep them in power.

If the Progressive Conservatives are returned to Parliament with a majority, I for one will breathe a sign of relief for it will mean that the Canadian Nation is not so easily fooled into giving up the responsible government which is its birthright for a mess of promissory political pottage. — Charles D. Jackson, 50 View Royal Avenue.

Postcards

While I enjoyed the article on postcard collecting which appeared in the Jan. 25 edition, I feel it may convey to the non-collector the idea that all early cards are worth ". . . from a few dollars to hundreds of dollars apiece . . ."

I agree that scarce categories of cards (such as Art Nouveau, Art Deco and woven silks) command high prices, but categories most frequently encountered in old collections (European churches, English beaches and scenes of the Rockies, for example), even though 60 to 75 years old, are available in great quantities and can be frequently purchased for as little as ten cents apiece.

It is this availability of lower priced cards which has been a factor in attracting many enthusiasts to the postcard collecting hobby during the past few years.

I would encourage anyone having an old album of postcards to have someone knowledgeable examine it in order that its true worth can be determined and care be taken for its preservation. — Michael Rice, Co-ordinator, Victoria Postcard Collectors Club, 1895 Farrel Crescent, Saanichton.

Bed wanted

Recently I was taken to hospital via ambulance, because of very severe back pains, taken to emergency, given every attention by my doctor and the staff in attendance, but had to spend the next 24 hours on a stretcher for want of room and a bed.

I was squeezed in between other stretchers, men, women and children. One young man had to relieve himself on a bedpan less than three feet away from my stretcher (imagine his embarrassment) with nothing but a cotton drape between us. A young child, five or six, was coughing his little heart out several spaces further on.

All this, when our government tells us they have a surplus. I just don't understand. — A. Sauter, Victoria.

Good hospital

During January I visited our family doctor. The result was an X-ray followed by an urgent request from the doctor to go to the hospital immediately. This caused me some apprehension. I had heard, recently, so many unfavourable things about our hospital, that I was not very enthusiastic about going there.

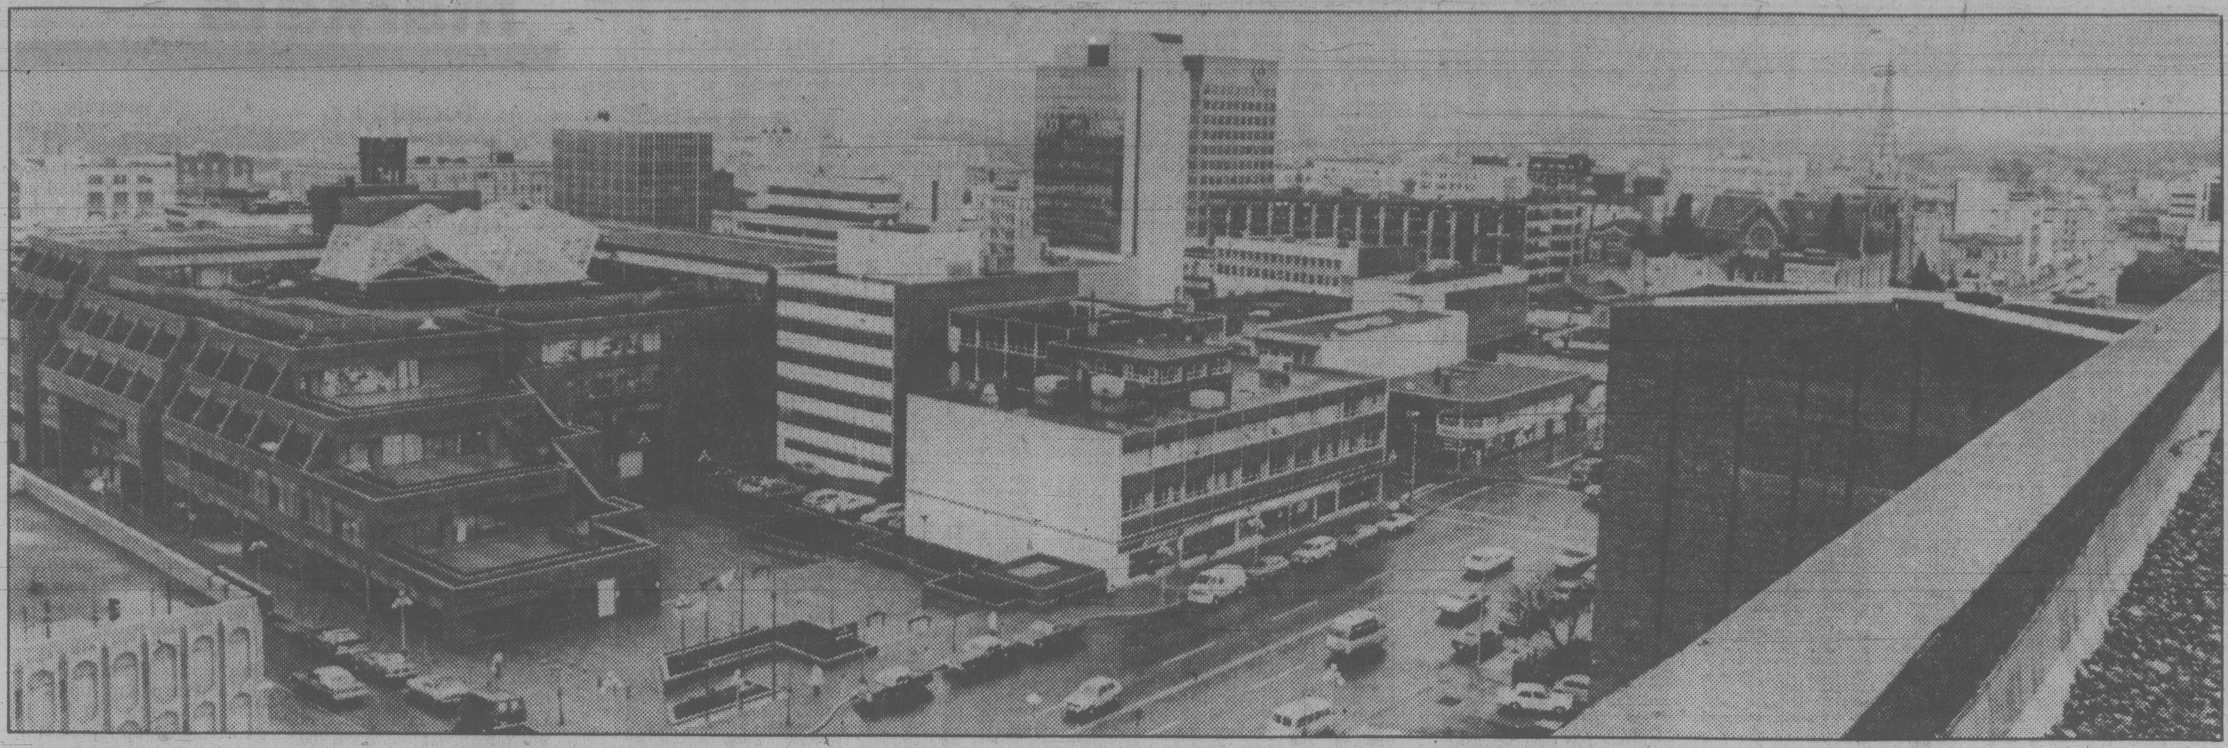
However, from the time I went to the admitting office until I was discharged seven days later, I experienced nothing but the utmost kindness and consideration. The admistration was perfect. The concern of the nurses and hospital personnel was far beyond the call of duty. The meals were exceptionally good.

I do wish to say thank you to the hospital staff. We have a hospital of which we may be very proud. — Rev. A. I. Higgins, 810 Foul Bay Road.

Rewarding

It was a wise and rewarding decision: "Three men and true!" — and then, the relief of the civilized electorate in not observing them on TV as, goaded by their own petard, they might have thrown each other to the lions! We now may have such respite as will enable us to vote towards the future of Canada. — Kathleen M. Worthington-Lake, 990 Hampshire Road.

The challenge of the 1980s



More changes are planned for skyline in city's continuing facelift

The downtown heart must be kept beating

By Barbara McLintock

and Leslie Yates

A little less than a year ago, realtor Pip Holmes was elected president of the Downtown Business Association to lead the downtown community into the 1980s.

He was not optimistic. "The downtown area could be placed on the endangered species list unless we take action," he said.

He had a list of requirements he believed were essential if downtown was to continue to thrive and grow. They included:

☐ A new five-storey carpark on Yates Street.

Now, a year later, Holmes has already seen significant progress made on most of the tasks on the list. The new parkade is being planned, not for Holmes' Yates Street site, but for a part of downtown where additional parking is perhaps even more badly needed — the area near Government and Pandora.

The sod has been turned — or, more precisely, the asphalt has been broken — on the Reid site for the convention centre.

'Asphalt has been broken' on Reid site for convention centre.

A final new, larger site for the bus depot will be chosen by the Urban Transit Authority within two months, and a city alderman is leading a fight to have that site become the focus for an integrated transportation centre downtown.

Some further development of the Old Town area has been undertaken with the successful proposal by Sam Bawlf, former Victoria alderman and cabinet minister, to build a luxury condominium development on the waterfront next to Hartwig Court.

The idea of the city-financed study is, in fact, the only neglected item on the list.

Moreover, other plans for downtown have been growing, above and beyond Holmes' list.

Chief of these is the facelift to be given to Chinatown. After a thorough study of the area by University of Victoria geography professor David Lai, city council agreed to a program that will include underground wiring, special street signs, repainting of buildings, and the construction of a special Gate of Harmonious Interest as an entrance to Chinatown.

Another downtown improvement is the determined decision by city council to encourage significant residential development downtown. Council has adopted the Harris Green report which advocates that much of the area bounded by Fort, Pandora, Cook and Quadra eventually be turned over to apartment, townhouse and condominium accommodation.

There is also the announcement by The Bay that it plans to upgrade its main store at the corner of Douglas and Fisgard, thereby ensuring the presence of the major department stores in the downtown core.

The result is that few businessmen, politicians or planners are today pessimistic about the future of the downtown core in the 1980s.

"Just look around you," says Brian Weekley, economic planner for the Capital Regional District. "Does this downtown look as though it's dying?"

Indeed, it does not. Equipment is working on the site of Bawlf's condominium development. It is working on the Reid site. And though it is January, the low point of the tourist season, the downtown still seems to bustle with people and cars.

That is not to say that anyone is complacent. The experience of many U.S. cities, and indeed of some larger Canadian cities, has demonstrated how quickly the vitality of a downtown community can be sapped away, leaving nothing but small businesses struggling to stay alive and society's down-and-outers finding comfort in the only place that will have them.

Downtown businessmen worry constantly about the establishment of suburban shopping malls that lure the Victoria resident shoppers away from downtown. They are frustrated by the determination of other municipalities to expand the tax base by allowing the creation of the malls with their one-stop shopping and their acres of free parking. The regional plan emphasizes that downtown Victoria should remain the central business district for all Greater Victoria, but they are worried that this status will be gradually eroded a little at a time until it is too late.

One who has long been concerned is Bawlf, who has a strong academic background in land use and site location as well as practical experience as both developer and politician.

He has suggested in the past that a move by one of the major department stores to build a full-sized store at a new, outlying shopping centre could be disastrous for downtown.

Bawlf's theory is that Victoria's downtown is already rather oddly-shaped, from an economic viewpoint. Traditionally, he explains, a downtown should consist of two major department stores to form anchors at each end of a strip. In between should be the smaller stores, neatly located along the strip.

Victoria has the two department stores — The Bay at Douglas and Fisgard, and Eaton's at Douglas and View. But the strip between them is not a concentrated shopping area. Rather it is a mixture of chain stores, banks, and a few small shops.

The real strip of small stores exists on Government Street, using the Empress Hotel as an anchor at one end and drifting away into nothingness at the other. Bawlf says this layout makes life difficult for the merchants in the northern and western parts of downtown — those in his own developments of Bastion Square and Market Square, for example. They are too far away from The Bay or Eaton's to attract the downtown shoppers, too far off the Government Street track to become a natural part of the tourists' walk.

City Hall the focal point

For some time his answer has been a third department store, located to provide an anchor for downtown in the northwestern part of the area. So far. however, he has found no takers.

If a third department store isn't available, a convention centre — more properly called a trade and conference centre — may be a good substitute. Many businessmen believe the centre, due to be ready for the 1982 convention season, will make all the difference to the future health of downtown.

Further development of the Old Town area will soon be under way

The planners think it may form that second anchor at the end of the Government Street/Bastion Square strip. Bawlf has pointed out that Bastion Square was always intended to be a cross-through between Government Street and the Inner Harbor, not a cul-de-sac as it is now.

Moreover, the convention centre site is little more than a block away from Market Square, perhaps allowing that retail development to become a route taken between the centre and refurbished Chinatown.

If the physical location of the centre is perceived as a boon to the downtown economy, even more important is the activity the centre will attract. It is seen as the key to making tourism a year-round industry in Greater Victoria, ending the summer boom and winter bust cycle.

Traditionally, tourism has been a key factor but it has not enabled businesses downtown to maintain a year-round base. Every year some restaurants and shops have been unable to weather the long winter tourist drought.

That should change with the start-up of the convention centre. A regular weekly influx of several hundred conference delegates is expected to stabilize the tourist base of the downtown economy.

Weekley says the importance of this in providing employment cannot be overemphasized. Some permanent, full-time jobs will be created, he says, but the greatest benefit from the centre will be the number of existing, seasonal jobs that will become year-round jobs.

He says many downtown tourist businesses, such as restaurants, must now lay off a high proportion of their staff in the winter. "They just can't afford to carry staff for six months or more when business has dropped off."

But the influx of conference-goers should allow many to keep most of their staff on throughout the year. "Even if there's a quiet month or two, the employers will be able to carry the staff for that long. It's that great long period with little business that results in the layoffs."

The construction industry will also benefit from the centre. Not only will many workers be required to build the centre itself, but it has sparked a new interest in hotel construction in the downtown area. Henry Eng has had Arthur Erickson design a hotel for his property on the west side of the Inner Harbor; Flag Inns is planning a new complex on Belleville; Sandman Inns is working on a plan for the north end of downtown; and rumors of several other expansions or new projects are in the air.

Mel Cooper, past president of the Chamber of Commerce and a leading proponent of the conference centre, contends it will provide another long-term benefit: it will bring Victorians downtown for the events staged there. Along with the out-of-town conferences, it is expected the centre will be home to a wide variety of cultural events, trade shows, and community gatherings. And, says Cooper, the Victorians who attend those events will often stay downtown to shop or to dine at local restaurants.

Cooper hopes that the conference centre will expand, eventually providing Victoria with a major trade centre for the Pacific Rim. Another possibility is the establishment of a British Trade Commission office here to serve all of western North America.

Neither Cooper nor any of the other interviewed downtowners envisioned major changes to the physical character of downtown in this decade. The need to maintain as much of Victoria's character as possible for the tourist trade will prevent the city from allowing the development of a high-rise, glass-and-concrete skyline common to so many North American cities.

A few suggestions are always made for improvements, however. Cooper, for example, sees the possibility of a downtown beautification program involving the addition of statuary, art, mosaics, and fountains.

Others suggest additional services, such as a comprehensive food marketplace, an increase in cultural events, or even just a good fresh fish market.

There's no doubt, however, that changes in transportation systems are needed. The inter-city bus depot, now located beside the Empress parking lot, must be moved within a couple of years. Everyone agrees it should be substantially upgraded and expanded.

Chinatown improvements, more residential units, are also in works

Leading the campaign for a completely integrated transportation centre is Victoria alderman John Cooper (no relation to Mel). Cooper, along with a number of Chamber of Commerce directors and Mayor Bill Tindall, want the centre built on the block across from City Hall on Douglas Street. Arriving visitors would then be close to the centre of downtown, instead of at one end of it.

John Cooper envisions the block developed as a centre for city buses, long-distance buses, and the E & N dayliner. Commercial and hotel development should also be part of the package.

The Urban Transit Authority is now studying the best possible site for the new bus terminal, and a decision is expected to be announced within a couple of months.

Improvements to the public transit system downtown would ease some of the pressure on downtown streets and parking facilities. However, most businessmen are convinced that the provision of adequate parking is crucial to keeping downtown competitive with suburban shopping centres. The city's Advisory Planning Commission made a study of parking facilities last year, and recommended at least two new parkades. Planning for one is already underway.

City parking policy should also satisfy the need to attract visitors, shoppers and tourists — not the need for commuters to have cheap places to park all day while they work. With that in mind, the city has already begun to consider changes in policy to allow cheap parking for short periods of time, but to increase the rates for those who stay all day — or all month.

Weekley collects economic statistics for the entire region. "I don't see a challenge to the vitality of the city core," he concludes.

"Why should there be? We already have the most beautiful downtown area on the west coast of North America. All we have to do is retain that, and to fine-tune it."

Tomorrow: The quality of life

LONG LIFE MEANS MORE THAN JUST A MAINTENANCE-FREE BATTERY FROM FIRESTONE.

The battery in your car provides the electricity needed to crank the engine and fire the spark plugs to start the engine. Without a good battery all the electrical systems fail.

Firestone Long Life batteries give you power to spare for cold weather starts. Oh yes, and maintenance-free means it never needs water added under normal conditions, reduces gassing, virtually eliminates corrosion from the battery and reduces self-discharge.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply higher at the close of active trading Thursday.

Interest in oil and gas stocks were responsible for the advance analysts said.

Volume was 9.03 million compared with 8.54 million Wednesday.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 209 advanced, 185 declined and 162 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led tradining in the industrials, dropping .05 to $7.80 on 65,050 shares and Proflex Ltd. remained steady at .27 on 7,000. Taro Industries remained unchanged at $4.10 on 5,500 and Grouse Mountain remained unchanged at .80 on 5,100. Northway Gestalt dropped .05 to $2.25 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. remained steady at $1.60.

On the resource and development board, Ni-Cal Development rose ¼ at $16¼ on 108,625 shares and Barrier Reef Resources gained .10 to $1.10 on 101,900. Silver Standard advanced .22 to $2.10 on 91,780 and Colby Mines Ltd. rose .05 to $3.25 on 89,100. Canalta Resources gained .04 to $1.09 and Rio Plata Silver Mines dropped .13 to $2.12.

Quinto Mining Corp. led trading on the curb exchange, remaining steady at $1.70 on 424,900 shares and Nomad Mines Ltd. rose $1.20 to $3.60 on 259,500. Poseidon Explorations rose .10 to .90 on 226,000 and Great World Resources gained .11 to $1.65 on 89,100. Burlington Gold advanced .03 to .88 and Interlake Development Corp. rose .04 to .74.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a strong advance in heavy trading Thursday, carrying the market's early-1980 rally to new highs.

A Kuwaiti newspaper reported that the American hostages in Tehran might soon be released. But one U.S. official said he had no confirmation of such a development.

Some analysts contend that investors recently have been paying more attention to the domestic economic outlook than to the Middle East situation anyway.

Persistent strength in the market has been attributed to a move of institutional funds out of bonds and into stocks because of the prospect of continuing rapid inflation.

Oil and rail issues, which spearheaded the market's advance on Wednesday, showed more strength Thursday.

The five most active NYSE issues were all oils — Gulf, up 2½ to $43⅝; Occidental Petroleum, up ½ to $30⅛; Texaco, up 1⅜ to $38⅞; Exxon, up 1¾ to $64½; and Standard Oil of California, up 3⅝ to $72⅛.

Among the rails, Chessie System was up 2⅜ to $32⅞ and Santa Fe Industries added 1¼ to $65¾.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market firmed near the close of quite trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index jumped 8.4 to 464.3.

Golds declined while industrials advanced.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

ROYAL TRUST GUARANTEES YOU A SMOOTH 12½%

Our Guaranteed Savings Account RRSP.

This is just one of Royal Trust's unique range of six retirement savings plans. Ride with this one, and you'll roll in 12½% interest. Guaranteed until March 31, 1980.

Guaranteed interest rate.

Every three months, we'll bump in the interest on your minimum monthly balance and compound it. Your interest rate is guaranteed to be not less than ¼ of 1% above the Royal Trust's Blue Chip Savings rate in effect on the 1st day of each calendar quarter. We'll send you a quarterly statement to keep track of your earnings as well as our rate for the next 3 month period.

And this big plus.

Royal Trust doesn't charge any fees for this plan. You can open your Guaranteed Savings Account RRSP with a minimum of $25.

Get your free RRSP booklet at any of our branches.

Weldwood

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. reports net income of $35.3 million or $7.18 a share in 1979, a 14-per cent increase over profits of $31.1 million or $6.32 a share in 1978.

Net sales rose nine per cent to $528.3 million in 1979 from $474.3 million the year before.

The company said "high rates of stumpage" paid to the provincial government on previously-bouyant lumber prices had a serious effect on the year's earnings.

Domtar

Domtar Inc. reports 1979 profits of $97.9 million, up 54 per cent from the $63.3 million reported for 1978.

Per share profit increased to $6.57 in 1979 from $4.23 the previous year.

The corporation attributed the gains to increased margins on its pulp, fine paper, newsprint and linerboard products, and on increased sales volumes of fine paper and masonry products. Sales increased to $1,504.1 million from $1,254.9 million.

Great-West

Great-West Life Assurance Co. reports it sold $11.5 billion worth of insurance and annuities in 1979, a 42 per cent rise over the previous year.

The sales of insurance coverage, in terms of the amount of protection provided, and annuities, measured by their maturity value, were a record high for the company, and were split almost equally between Canada and the United States.

Health insurance sales were up 52 per cent over 1978.

The company's total health insurance business, measured in gross annual premiums, was $523,771,000 at the end of 1979.

Premium income was $1,233,711,000, up 21 per cent over 1978. Net investment income was up 28 per cent, and the net rate of return on investments was 9.1 per cent.

Directors approved payment of a quarterly dividend of $2 a share Feb. 29 to shareholders of record at the close of business Feb. 14, a 50 cent increase in the quarterly rate.

Abitibi-Price

Abitibi-Price Inc., has reported that heavy demand for newsprint and other paper products pushed 1979 profits to $115 million on total sales of $1.4 billion.

The company had earnings of $78 million in 1978 on sales of $1.2 billion.

"In spite of capacity operation, our newsprint mills could not keep pace with customer requirements and ended the year with a large backlog of unfilled orders," company president R.C. Gimlin said.

Hearing, speech aid 'in a mess'

Speech and hearing services in the Capital Regional District are in a mess and political decisions are needed to get services co-ordinated, says assistant regional health officer Dr. Brian Allen.

Allen told the regional district's community health service committee Wednesday the district's single therapist is currently responsible for speech therapy service to all pre-school children, private school students and all adults.

"As a result we are simply skimming the surface," he said.

There are six agencies offering speech therapy service in the area, he said. Children with special problems, such as cerebral palsy or cleft palate, are treated at the George Pearkes Clinic, where there are six therapists.

"The rest of the children have to be cared for by our single therapist," he said.

School district 61 has four therapists and a budget that permits eight. The other two school districts each have a therapist. Adults with multiple problems, caused by a stroke, for example, go to the Gorge Road Hospital but all others must be cared for by the regional district, Allen said.

Allen said there is a wait of eight to 10 weeks for patients in need of testing for hearing problems.

Services are divided between three agencies — the regional district, provincial government and Glendale Hospital. Allen said all three have excellent equipment but Glendale has not had an audiologist for the past three years.

The provincial government has two audiologists and the regional district has one.

The CRD audiologist's work load is accelerating because of emphasis on identifying babies likely to be deaf as a result of prenatal influences.

A total of 250 new-born babies were tested last year, five of whom had hearing problems.

He said the provincial government unit deals only with patients in need of hearing aids. The rest must be treated by the regional district.

The committee asked that Allen make a report, complete with recommendations, as the first step in trying to get co-ordination of services.

Health unit site considered

The Capital Regional District's board next Wednesday will consider buying land near Quadra and McKenzie for a new Saanich health unit.

The board's community health service committee was told Wednesday the unit must move out of the Saanich municipal hall because Saanich needs the space.

Regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil said the new quarters should be closer to Gordon Head because of population growth. If the new unit is built the McKenzie-Shelbourne office will be closed.

Directors were told the land would cost $5.37 per square foot. An option has already been taken on it.

Executive director Dennis Young said rental space is available close by but it is to the advantage of the regional district to own its own building. Once built, it could be rented back to the district so that senior governments would be responsible for 75 per cent of the rent, he said.

He said a development permit for the property has been issued by Saanich and the regional district will be required to dedicate land for road-widening and contribute $6,000 toward upgrading of sewers.

Director fails to stop work

The suspension of work on a sewage collection system at Ganges was automatically lifted Wednesday in spite of Salt Spring Island director Yvette Valcourt's bid for an extension.

She told the Capital Regional District's solid waste management and sewage disposal committee she had met with Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm and will see Attorney-General Allan Williams next Tuesday to discuss "grave matters" concerning the sewage project.

Until then, she said, the suspension should be continued.

Valcourt earlier persuaded the regional board to have work suspended until she met with Vander Zalm.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday the board had ordered a suspension until Feb. 6 and it was automatically lifted as of that date.

Committee chairman Bob Wright said his group had no authority to order a further suspension. Valcourt said she will make a bid for further suspension when the board meets next Wednesday.

Campbell said the provincial government's Pollution Control Branch had ordered the board to build a sewage disposal system for Ganges and the work in question is essential for a collection system.

He said the branch is considering a request that an outfall not be built in Ganges harbor but there has been no objection to the collection system.

Ruling a 'sad blow' to democracy

Saanich council struck "a sad blow for democracy," Mayor Mel Couvelier said Wednesday when aldermen defeated a motion that would have forced the municipal board of variance to hand down written decisions.

Ald. Irene Block complained to the finance committee — which was sitting as council — that an appeal of a board ruling should never have been heard by council.

Prompting Block's bid for an amendment to Saanich's zoning bylaw was the refusal of a Cedarwood Street resident to accept a board of variance ruling.

The resident had asked for a variance to allow the enclosing of a sundeck at the rear of the house, and when the variance was refused, the resident appealed the decision to council.

"Our staff should not have brought this before us," Block said. "We were compounding a felony."

Block said council had no right to consider appeals against board rulings.

She noted that appeals of a board decision to a county court judge are allowed under two clauses of the bylaw.

If Block's amendment to the bylaw had been successful, the board of variance would have had to hand down written decisions that would contain identifying information, a definition of the questions at issue and a summation of arguments from both sides of any issue.

It would also list the findings of the board on questions of fact, the evidence on which the findings were based and the reasoning justifying the findings.

Couvelier supported the motion, saying that a person "is entitled to know his arguments have been heard and, what is more important, been understood.

"A simple 'yes' or 'no' is just not good enough in today's society. We have to have written decisions," the mayor said, adding that the board must be held accountable for its decisions and be prepared to defend them.

Ald. Howard Sturrock wondered if there was any need for the board at all, insofar as the development permit system is now in operation.

"Is there any point in us having a board if people can come to council and seek an appeal?" he asked.

"You would start a war by asking the board to explain their decisions," Ald. John Mika said.

The motion was defeated 4 to 3.

The economic development commission established three years ago to entice industry to Victoria is dormant, but perhaps the Capital Regional District or the Chamber of Commerce might drop a line to the Intel Corp. of Santa Clara, Calif.

The computer chip manufacturer (sales last year $650 million) is looking for space to expand. In a story Jan. 28 about "Silicon Valley" south of San Francisco where the electronics industry is concentrated, The Vancouver Sun sketched Intel's shopping list:

"A large city with a reputation as a good place to live, an airport, schools and universities and a chunk of serviced land, for which the company is prepared to pay top rates.

"The promise: A non-polluting industry bringing in 5,000 to 10,000 jobs over a five-year period and a policy of on-the-job training that will mean most of the jobs will be filled locally."

Intel is restless because the Silicon Valley is getting crowded. Santa Clara has only space for another 1,300 building lots.

How about sending the company one of those glossy brochures which tell how eager Victoria is for newcomers and prospective investors?

All inquiries, please, to Intel Corp., 3065 Bowers, Sanata Clara, Calif. Or if the chamber or the CRD can spare $4, telephone direct 112-408-987-8080. That'll get you three minutes of chairman of the board Gordon Moore's time.

Tell him the press sent you. Who says we're never constructive?

Great hulking railway cars on a downtown city street, competing with automobiles? Crazy.

But examined a little more carefully, the proposal makes sense. It is quite workable. Trains now come across the Johnson Street bridge and up Store. They don't seem to scare the horses.

From the bridge to Cooper's proposed terminal on the north side of Pandora would be a similar trip, just 1,600 feet. Only 90 seconds at 12 miles an hour.

This phobia about mixing traffic and tracks is relatively modern, for two and three-car trains of streetcars have travelled city streets in harmony for decades prior to the misguided rails-to-rubber switchover in the 1950s.

Look on the Dayliner as just another big bus or a semi-trailer.

To make it safe, Cooper has borrowed the traffic separation system used on the First Narrows bridge in Vancouver. It has three lanes, one northbound, another for southbound traffic and a middle lane reversible for the rush hours.

Overhead lights every couple of hundred yards tell drivers which lane is open in their direction. Fairly simple and foolproof.

The description on paper makes it sound like a mad scheme, but it's worked well for more than a decade.

Steel tracks laid down on Pandora from Blanshard to the the bridge might make bicycling in the rain tricky, but that's the only disadvantage I can see.

On the other hand, the advantages are numerous. The Dayliner would become a real inter-city rail service. Its present terminus over in Victoria West is in the middle of nowhere and connects with no other method of transport except shank's mare.

Patrons have starved waiting for cabs and until recently there wasn't even a pay phone in the spartan little station.

A downtown terminal would give people an incentive to use the E & N as a commuter carrier, which already has stops in Vic West, Esquimalt, View Royal, Langford and points north.

The city hall location for a transport terminal makes planning sense as well. The business district of Victoria has been slowly edging northwards ever since the Centennial Square project nearly 20 years ago began to rejuvenate the neighborhood.

The province last year completed a major office block on Blanshard, there's Market Square down Pandora and two blocks west, Chinatown is undergoing a $1 million spruce-up. A major new hotel is planned for Herald and Douglas.

The terminal could be the centrepiece of a revived city hall precinct, which hasn't been the real heart of downtown since they demolished the old city market and stopped running interurbans out to Saanich from Douglas and Pandora.

Train tycoon Alan Parkin and engineer Debbie Jones . . . itching to hit the rails

Does anybody out there want to make tracks?

By PAUL MINVIELLE

It's probably an exaggeration to call Alan Parkin a railroad tycoon but as of right now, at this very moment, he owns the entire rolling stock of a railway.

To be specific, Parkin has four locomotives — two electric and two gas-powered — 15 steel ore cars, 14 flat and boxcars and some spare parts.

Of course, it's not exactly CN-sized stuff.

It's scaled-down equipment that was used by Canadian Industries Ltd. to move men and material around James Island, near Sidney.

There were also steam-driven engines and compressors and a variety of mechanical equipment.

"You wouldn't believe it," says Parkin. "We've sold a mountain of this stuff."

As he demonstrated a hand-powered, side dumping ore car, Parkin commented: "Virtually none of this stuff is in existence anywhere anymore."

He had planned to set the rail system up on his own property, but it's zoned for agriculture and he doesn't have the time or the resources to wait for 1½ years or longer to get it rezoned.

He said several people have flown into Victoria to take pictures of the railroad, but so far no one has come up with his asking price.

"They've got to go home and see if they can get local approval too," Parkin said.

The price doesn't include any track although Parkin hopes to get some that's still on the island.

While CIL's James Island plant is closed, the company will apparently be using it for storage for the next five years or so.

Parkin regrets the railroad wasn't left in place.

He said there are at least eight miles of track, maybe even 12, which serviced all parts of the island.

Parkin thinks it would have added a special dimension to a resort on the property.

Oops. Almost forgot.

You'll need $45,000 too.

Ferry bus fare up by 14%

Pacific Coach Lines has increased bus fares on the Victoria-Vancouver ferry run by as much as 14 per cent.

The one-way fare during peak travel times increased to $7.25 from $6.60, effective Feb. 1, while the one-way fare for off-peak periods went up 75 cents to $6.25.

Pacific Coach Lines was created in April, 1979, with the merger of Pacific Stage Lines and Vancouver Island Coach Lines into a single Crown company.

The company reports to Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm but requires no authority to increase its fares other than that of its board of directors.

Jack Thomas, general manager of the Victoria-Vancouver Island operation, said Wednesday Vander Zalm was aware of the increase, but he did not know whether the minister had reported it to cabinet.

Thomas said the fare increase was the first since 1960.

The company gave no public notice of the increase. New fares were posted in bus depots here and in Vancouver.

Thomas said the corporation is not legally required to publish fare increases.

Budget-tied fees coming for UVic

By AB KENT

A new policy on student tuition fees — which could see them rise along with university budgets — will be developed by the University of Victoria's board of governors within four months.

Board chairman Joe Cunliffe said Wednesday the finance committee must decide between now and June on a system that would allow tuition fees to respond to the pressures that force university spending higher.

"In the next six weeks we'll be tieing something down," Cunliffe said.

Cunliffe, however, said students should pay more than a token fee for their education.

If it costs $5,000 a year to educate a student, is it right to ask only $400 in tuition fees?.

Student fees as a percentage cost of education have dropped steadily over the years, the chairman pointed out.

The finance committee reported to a recent board meeting on the lock-fee system which going into effect at the University of B.C. this year.

The move apparently meets with approval of the Universities Council of B.C., which apportions public financing between the universities.

CUNLIFFE
. . . 'more than token'

Following a council suggestion that universities examine the UBC policy, UVic has opened its tuition fees to scrutiny.

Students have responded by asking the board to at least give 60 days notice of any fee increase.

They have also condemned the UBC move as the first attempt in Canada to set tuition as a fixed revenue source.

"We expect that there will also be serious attempts here to follow suit. Students cannot accept any proposal of this nature," said UVic Alma Mater Society external vice-president Terry Johnson.

Student representatives will appear at the Feb. 18 meeting of the board of governors to argue against annual, fixed fee hikes.

A 10 per cent fee hike goes into effect at UBC this spring, and thereafter tuition fees must produce a minimum of 10 per cent of the university's operating costs.

Fees at present produce about 8.5 per cent of UBC operating revenue.

"It sets a dangerous precedent," said Johnson.

Light branch to move

A proposal to move the city's street light employees to the Garbally Road works yard and to lease out present quarters in the old city light building at 450 Swift was approved today by the public works committee.

Assistant municipal manager Colin Crisp told the committee the city engineering department wants to renovate the 90-year-old blacksmith shop at the works yard to house the street lighting division at a cost of $170,000.

That would leave the old city light building on the Inner Harbor vacant and Crisp proposed to lease it for warehouse space until Chinatown redevelopment plans are firm.

The eventual plan is to sell the building (a potential price of $180,000 was mentioned) but that hinges on relocating the adjacent garbage wharf.

And that depends on the Capital Regional District making up its mind on future plans for region-wide garbage disposal.

Shorter outfall okayed against expert advice

Federal experts have warned it won't work but Capital Regional District directors decided Wednesday to recommend the regional board go ahead with a shorter 3,500-foot $4 million outfall at Clover Point.

The solid waste management and sewage committee also recommended a contract be drawn up between the district and consulting engineers CH2M Hill for up to $280,000. This amount will cover costs of design and supervision of construction.

The Pollution Control Branch has granted a permit to build the outfall with the proviso that the district confirm in writing that it is physically and technically feasible to extend the outfall to the originally-planned 6,000 feet if monitoring proves it to be necessary.

The permit was granted in spite of warnings by Environment Canada experts that the outfall length should not be shortened.

F.G. Claggett, manager of Enviroment Canada's technical services group, stated in a report:

"Environment Canada recommends that the Clover Point outfall length required by the (original) permit be maintained.

"The temptation to ignore field data and approve a shorter outfall based mostly on cost considerations should be avoided since it will be difficult to prevent the same approach being taken by other municipalities.

"It should be recognized that once the outfall has been installed it will be difficult, if not impossible, to effect an extension. The alternative of imposing sewage treatment with the shorter outfall will be more costly in terms of capital and operating expenses and may not achieve its purpose."

PCB engineer J.W.A. Donald noted the CH2M Hill study does not prove discharge at the proposed location will not cause shoreline pollution but he felt the permit could be granted on a trial basis.

"To require the expenditure of several millions of dollars which might not be absolutely necessary cannot be condoned," he reasoned.

CH2M Hill engineer Steven Lackey said the project could be ready for tender in June, the contract could be awarded in July and the outfall completed by October.

The permit calls for work to be completed by Dec. 31.

At present sewage is being discharged about 200 feet from the tip of Clover Point through a pipe that broke at a weld during construction. The regional district, engineering consultants and the contractor of the uncompleted outfall have been suing each other for two years.

An announcement of a settlement is expected soon.

Lackey noted the regional district has already bought the polyethelene pipe that originally was to be used but he is investigating costs and stability of other types of pipe.

On another outfall front, directors were told that tests on the Macaulay Point outfall show it is still meeting PCB standards — even with 20 feet of pipe broken off the end.

Regional engineer Norman Howard told the committee an underwater camera was used for the inspection and a videotape, covering the whole length of the 6,100-foot pipe, is available.

The camera inspection confirmed the 20-foot tip of the outfall is missing but no change in water conditions had taken place.

A strong green dye was inserted into the pumping station well and then pumped through the outfall. At the same time a check was made from a helicopter and a boat.

"After an hour of pumping a small subsurface green cloud was noticed over the end of the pipe. The green dye cloud was quickly dissipated before it broke through the water surface, and no sign of the dye was visible from the boat," Howard reported.

In other business, the committee agreed to recommend to the regional board that $21,970 be paid to the University of Victoria. The money represents 12 monthy payments of $1,831 for the services of Dr. Derek Ellis as co-ordinator of the monitoring program in the McMicking Point outfall area from March 1980 to March 1981.

Engineer strikes out on energy-saving plan

Regional engineer Norman Howard failed Wednesday in an attempt to launch a wide-ranging energy-saving program in the unorganized areas of the Capital Regional District.

He wanted a program aimed at enforcing such requirements as double-glazed windows, more efficient heating systems and improved building lighting.

Bob Wright, chairman of the solid waste management and sewage disposal committee, said he was dead against Howard's recommendation that the regional building code, which would affect all people in the electoral areas, be amended to require such moves.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said a court case had ruled that municipalities or regional districts do not have the power to demand tighter regulations than the National Building Code.

Howard had wanted an additional $4,500 for "staff time and advice from electrical consultants." This was turned down.

The directors also rejected Howard's suggestion that a citizens' Energy Use Advisory Committee be formed.

The directors did agree with Howard that a program aimed at saving energy in all regional buildings, recreational complexes, sewer and water pumping stations, regional vehicles and treatment plants should be initiated.

They also endorsed Howard's suggestion that staff investigate the availability of federal and provincial funds to help defray the costs of this program.

Young boxers eager while vets look back

Training tempos pick up for keen young Victoria boxers and some older punchers look back fondly as the magic night of the Diamond Belt nears.

While today's hopefuls take a break from all the skipping and bag-punching in the basement gym of the Jaycee Hall on Quadra to talk excitedly about the championship event to be held in the Central Junior High School gym at 7 p.m. this Friday and Saturday, the veterans tell you what it was like at the last Diamond Belts in 1967 and '68.

"Both those tournaments were staged in the PNE Agrodome in Vancouver," says former Victoria fighter Brian Zelley. "The 1967 event had ex-world heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano as the guest of honor and referee and the next year that spot was filled by former world welterweight champion Jimmy McLarnin."

Many of the top boxers in the province took part in the Diamond Belts back then including Dave Wylie, Fred Fuller, Frank Scott, Wayne Boyce, Dick Findlay, Kalman Santosi and Clint Page. And there were four who have become well-known on the local boxing scene — Les Vegas, Ken Alexander, Bill Taylor and Zelley — representing the Island.

Zelley remembers his fights at both of those tournaments well. In 1967, he punched his way to the featherweight championship bout with victories over Brian Gray of Burnaby and Ted Webb of Gresham, Ore. In the final, however, he lost to Boyce of Vancouver. And it was Boyce again in 1968 who put Zelley out of contention in a preliminary bout.

Vegas lost in a preliminary welterweight bout to Jerry Winters of Vancouver, Wash., in the 1967 tourney but the next year won the championship for that weight with a third-round technical knockout (that reportedly featured many "bruising body blows") over Greg Gumfer of California.

Alexander, better known for his lacrosse skills in the Victoria area, competed in the 1967 Diamond Belt as a member of the old London Boxing Club but was outboxed by Marijon Kolar of North Vancouver in his light heavyweight bout.

Taylor was probably the most successful of the four. Fighting in the heavyweight division, he stopped Jamie Phills of the United States Navy in the third round and in a semi-final bout he decisioned the durable Don Staab of Seattle.

In the heavyweight final, Taylor faced the very experienced Seattle boxer Wes Craven, who had made short work of his earlier opponents knocking out both Larry High of Bremmerton, Wash., and Melvin Harris of Haney.

Taylor outboxed Craven for two rounds but the Seattle man came back strongly in the third round to earn a split decision.

After that 1967 Diamond Belt championship, Bill Taylor went on to become Canadian heavyweight boxing champion.

And so on Friday and Saturday nights in the gym at Central Junior High, local boxers will get a chance to show what they're made of and local fans will get the opportunity to see action in the once-famous Diamond Belt championships for the first time in 12 years in B.C.

Hopefuls Tim Johnson, Robert Cozens, Perry Evans, Larry Hitchmough and Lance Mitchell of the host Jaycee Boxing Club will compete in the Diamond Belt under the watchful eye of their coach Lou Bujdoso. And coach Mike Caird of the rival Victoria Athletic Association (formed after the demise of London Boxing Club) which is helping with the running of the tournament, will have Gary Robinson and Daniel O'Sullivan fighting.

The connection with the sport's oldsters and all their memories will be there, too, as the 1980 version of the Diamond Belt Championships will have Bob Perry, Joe McNeil and Vancouver Island Boxing Commissioner Rick Brough officiating.

Thus the stage is set, no doubt, for the creation of new memories to be shared sometime by today's boxers when one day they grow old and step out of the ring for that last time.

Hernandez signs with Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez, whose meteoric rise in 1979 landed him a share of the National League's Most Valuable Player Award, signed a five-year contract Wednesday with St. Louis Cardinals.

"The bottom line is I get to stay," Hernandez told a news conference. "I don't have to go to free agency. If I continue to perform they won't trade me, and that's what I wanted," said the 26-year-old Hernandez who was the NL's batting king with a .344 mark.

Hawks down Brandon, go three up on Cats

Portland Winter Hawks moved three points ahead of idle Victoria Cougars in the Western Division of the Western Hockey League by tripping Brandon Wheat Kings 7-2 Wednesday in Portland.

Cougars, however, have three games in hand and get a chance to diminish that margin tonight while playing the last-place Bruins in New Westminster.

In the only other game Wednesday, Regina Pats battled to a 3-3 deadlock with the Tigers in Medicine Hat.

Dobson and Babych each tallied on a power play and Robby Geale and Jim Benning scored at even strength as the Hawks took a 4-0 first-period lead. Following a power play goal at 8:16 of the second period by Brandon's Don Gillen, Babych and Ron Chorney connected to give Portland a 6-1 lead. Dobson led off the third period with his 47th goal of the season at 3:05 before Steve Patrick scored Brandon's final goal.

Hawks' goalie Clint Malarchuk made 27 saves to pick up his 16th victory. Scott Olson, who relieved Ron Popplestone in the Kings' net after Portland's third goal at 6:12 of the first period, made 45 saves while Popplestone had eight.

Pats and Tigers battled to a tie after a scoreless overtime period.

Regina took an early 2-0 lead with goals from Ron Flockhart and Darren Galley but Brad Kempthorne scored twice for Medicine Hat to tie the score at 2-2 at the end of the first period.

After a scoreless second period, Flockhart scored his second goal of the night at 8:50 of the third period. Brent Kiessig tied it again at 17:37. Summaries on page 13

Keegan sparkles

LONDON (CP) — England, with Kevin Keegan scoring both goals, defeated the Republic of Ireland 2-0 Wednesday in a Group 1 match in the European Nations Cup soccer championships.

England has qualified for this summer's finals in Italy.

Keegan put England ahead in the 34th minute, then added the clincher in the 73rd minute.

Games future is on the line

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Wednesday that this weekend's session of the IOC would be one of the most critical in the existence of the Olympic Games, alluding to sentiment in many countries that Moscow should not be the host for the 1980 Summer Games.

"I would say this is one of the most critical sessions of the IOC since the Sorbonne in 1894," said the Irish peer, 66, serving the last year of an eight-year term as president. It was in 1894 that the Games were reorganized after having been dormant for centuries.

The U.S. Olympic Committee is to present the IOC with President Carter's proposal that the 1980 Summer Olympics be moved from Moscow, postponed or cancelled unless the Soviets withdraw their troops from Afghanistan. The U.S. contingent is not bound by the president's request, but Carter has said he will ask that no U.S. team be sent to Moscow if the Games are held there, and U.S. sentiment is running heavily against U.S. participation in any Games held in Russia.

Of the 89 IOC members, 76 are expected to attend this weekend's general sessions. That is far greater attendance than might normally be expected for a session preceding the Winter Games.

Pound said recently he would attend the Lake Placid meetings with an open mind and, if a resolution dealing with a boycott were tabled, he would use his best judgment in voting.

Killanin arrived from Europe to preside over IOC executive committee sessions which begin today. He began a brief news conference by saying he did not wish to speak on the Moscow issue because he was travel-weary.

"I have a strong feeling that half the things that go wrong in the world are because people hop about on planes and give press conferences before they have recovered from jet lag," he said.

He did not address the issue directly but indicated clearly that he felt the Summer Olympics should go on in Moscow. "I have said that it would be unthinkable to move the Games. We signed a letter of agreement, which in my view has both moral and legal obligations."

He said he was sensitive to sentiment in the U.S. for boycotting the Games, but said he thought it was based on misinformation. He was not specific.

"While I do believe there are certain areas where governments can make suggestions to Olympic committees, I think it is very important that we should not be dictated to by governments on where we are going."

Whaler victory christens home

By Canadian Press

Homecoming for Hartford Whalers remained a familiar script Wednesday night — another game, another win.

"We couldn't play any better than we've been playing in Springfield," Mark Howe said after the Whalers downed Los Angeles Kings 7-3 in a National Hockey League game to officially open the rebuilt Hartford Civic Centre Coliseum.

After nearly two years of playing at Springfield, Mass., Civic Centre, 40 kilometres north of Hartford, the Whalers played their first game in the reconstructed coliseum since its roof collapsed under the weight of snow and ice two years ago. A near-capacity crowd of 14,448 was on hand.

Mark Howe and Blaine Stoughton led the Hartford attack with two goals and two assists each as the Whalers cruised to their eighth win in 11 games.

"We were feeling our way around the rink and we were a little uptight in the first period," said Whalers' coach Don Blackburn. "We have a lot of new players who have never played here before and the new building had something to do with our start."

Many of the veteran Whalers played in the old coliseum when the team was in the now-defunct World Hockey Association.

In other games, St. Louis Blues stormed back to defeat the Oilers 6-3 in Edmonton, Chicago Black Hawks played to a 3-3 draw with the Nordiques in Quebec and Washington Capitals managed a 2-2 tie with the Red Wings in Detroit.

The Whalers fell behind 2-0 on goals by Mike Murphy and Dean Hopkins in the first period. A power-play goal by Stoughton with little more than a minute to go in the period woke up the Whalers and they controlled the game the rest of the way as the Kings, weakened by injuries keeping high scorers Dave Taylor and Charlie Simmer out of action, began to play like their 1-10-1 record of the last three weeks.

Stoughton struck again on a power play — notching his 33rd goal of the season — at 12:06 of the second period. Then Howe took charge, getting two goals in a span of 1:05, both on wrist shots.

In the third period, Gordie Howe got into the scoring column at 3:29 when his slapshot eluded the glove of Los Angeles goalie Mario Lessard. The goal ended a 24-game drought for Howe and was his 12th of the season.

"I saved it for the right night," said Howe.

Blackburn said that, with Taylor and Simmer not dressed, the Whalers had little trouble figuring out how to handle the Kings.

"You take those two out of the lineup and they're operating with a 50-per-cent offence," he said. "All you have to worry about is (Marcel) Dionne and (Butch) Goring. If you stop those two, you stop the Kings."

Goalie Al Smith, who started in goal when the Whalers of the WHA moved to Hartford from Boston to open the original coliseum, said the wait for the new coliseum was worthwhile.

"A lot of things have happened to this club in the last eight years," he said. "Tonight, I felt appreciated and I'm happy to be part of the Whalers."

Kings' coach Bob Berry was in a different mood.

"We're going to have to make some changes," Berry said as he angrily assessed his team's performance. "Our guys are not trying and maybe we can find some hockey players somewhere who want to give an effort. I've had it with some of the guys on this team who are not trying."

It's now or never for Viking foes

A return to action by University of Victoria Vikings' captain Ian Hyde-Lay after a long injury layoff and the desperate competition provided by a team fighting to make the Canada West playoffs should highlight this weekend's intercollegiate basketball games.

Hyde-Lay, after making an impressive start to the season, broke a bone in his foot during the Vikings' first meeting with the Athletes in Action team back in November. He returned to the court early in January but broke the same bone and has been out since.

Coach Ken Shields says Hyde-Lay's foot has now healed and he will dress for Friday and Saturday night's games against University of Lethbridge Pronghorns at 8 p.m. both nights in UVic's McKinnon Gym. The UVic Vikettes tackle the Lady Pronghorns in preliminary games at 6:30 both evenings.

These two games, says Shields, are "must wins" for the Pronghorns if they are to have any hope of making the playoffs. Only the top two colleges go into the playoffs and Lethbridge is tied for fourth right now with the University of Alberta. They have 5-7 win-loss records and the teams immediately above them — Calgary and UBC — have 7-5 records. UVic Vikings are top with a 12-0 record.

"There are just eight league games remaining, including the two this weekend," Shields points out. "So Lethbridge has reached the point where if they lose any more they won't be in the playoffs."

That could be just enough incentive to cause the Pronghorns to be quite a handful for the Vikings, who swept both games last weekend over the Golden Bears in Edmonton.

And, although they've done much better at home this season than they've done on the road, the Pronghorns have several other things going for them, including the league-leading scorer Perry Mirkovich, who has an average of 23.5 points a game, in their lineup.

"Their coach is Ken Olynyk who played for me when I was coaching at Laurentian and was my assistant coach here at UVic last year," Shields explains. "So he's pretty familiar with us and our set-up and knows what we do."

The Vikings coach says he certainly isn't taking Lethbridge for granted.

"They gave us two very close games in Lethbridge at the start of the season and you just never know what they might pull off here," he says.

The Pronghorns showed their capacity for surprises last weekend when they split their two-game series in Calgary, scoring on two foul shots in the final five seconds to snatch the Friday night victory.

No wonder!

The high-riding Vikettes, who are unbeaten this season and are top-ranked in Canada, swept their two-game series in Edmonton last weekend while the lowly Lady Pronghorns were losing two to Calgary. The Lethbridge girls are tied for fourth spot in the six-team league with Alberta. Both have 5-9 records while the Vikettes are on top with a 14-0 mark.

"We had pretty comfortable games against them in Lethbridge at the start of the season," Kathy explains. "They're quite small and we were just too big and powerful for them."

The Vikettes' coach was more excited about an exhibition game at 2 p.m. Sunday in the McKinnon Gym her girls will play against a Vancouver Senior "A" Women's squad.

"They're called the Kirby's and have six national team players in their lineup," she points out. "We played them at the start of the season and only squeaked past them by three points — so this rematch should be a great game!"

Lanier big help in Bucks' victory

By The Associated Press

As Brian Winters' game-winning shot for Milwaukee Bucks swished through the net at the buzzer Wednesday, Bob Lanier had to shake a gut feeling that he still played for his old team, the woebegone Detroit Pistons.

"To show you how I've been conditioned, I swore that ball didn't go in — I swore it must have hit the rim," Lanier quipped after the game.

While it would have been good theatre if Lanier had scored the winning basket in his first game for the Bucks in their 111-109 National Basketball Association victory over Cleveland Cavaliers, it didn't happen.

However, the Bucks said Lanier's 6-foot-11 presence near the basket helped Winters get a better shot than he might have had otherwise.

After the Cavaliers' Kenny Carr had sunk one of three free throws to tie the score at 109-109 with 11 seconds left, the Bucks called time out. The first option on the play they designed in the huddle was to pass near the basket to Lanier, the seven-time NBA all-star obtained Monday from Detroit.

The Bucks said that when they looked to Lanier, Cavaliers' guard Randy Smith dropped back to help Dave Robisch cover the big centre. That helped free Winters, the second option on the play, and Winters' 20-foot shot from the top of the key split the net as time expired.

In other games it was Boston Celtics 129 Philadelphia 76ers 110; Denver Nuggets 122 Chicago Bulls 111; Houston Rockets 115 New Jersey Nets 114; Golden State Warriors 117 San Diego Clippers 92; Phoenix Suns 97 Kansas City Kings 95

"We set the play up for Bob as the first option, but we really didn't think we'd get it in to him, so we wanted to take one quick look to him and, if we had to, go to our second option right away," Bucks' coach Don Nelson said.

"I was pretty open," Winters said. "I had a real good shot because of Bob. He's like a magnet. He draws people around him because they just hate to see him get the ball low. Everybody collapses on him.

The Cavaliers didn't agree that Winters got a better shot because of Lanier, who sank four of 12 field goal attempts and scored 14 points.

"We were expecting Winters or (Junior) Bridgeman would take it all the way," Cavs' coach Stan Albeck said.

The lead changed hands six times in the last 2:51, the last time when Bridgeman, who scored 23 points, sank a jump shot to put the Bucks ahead 109-108 with 28 seconds left.

Four by Riddell spearhead assault

Chris Riddell fired four goals and came up with three assists Wednesday to lead Esquimalt Maple Leafs to a 15-2 rout over PPCLI Pats in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bob Martin, Terry Parsons and Murray McLaren added two goals each for the Leafs, who held period leads of 7-0 and 10-1, while singles were contributed by Randy Russell, Warren Smith, Rugs Pritchard, Wayne Larsen and Bill Adkin.

Five-year sentence ends in 10 months

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Bob Hayes, former track star and pro football player, will be released from prison next month. The former Olympic gold medalist and Dallas Cowboys wide receiver, serving five years for cocaine delivery, was granted a parole when Gov. Bill Clements signed the order Wednesday.

Hayes, 37, has served 10 months of a five-year sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

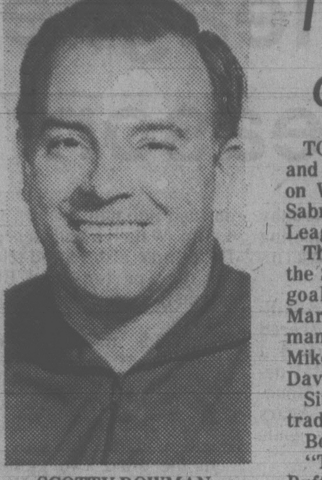
"I wrote him that I did so with a real sense of anticipation that with his experiences now, both bad and good, he could be a great influence on young people, not only in Texas but in the entire country," the governor said at a news conference.

Exhibition test

Victoria Budgets will face St. Catherines, the Canadian champion, in exhibition softball games July 8-9 at Royal Athletic Park.

The Ontario squad is scheduled to play in the world championship in Seattle starting July 10.

Budgets are scheduled to begin workouts around March 1 and anyone interested in trying out may obtain further information by telephoning manager Harvey Stevenson at 478-8247.



SCOTTY BOWMAN

There's no deal or explanation

TORONTO (CP) — Scotty Bowman, head coach and general manager of Buffalo Sabres, dismissed on Wednesday a newspaper report that had the Sabres involved in a multi-player National Hockey League transaction with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Star had quoted an unnamed source as saying the Sabres were close to a deal which would send goaltender Don Edwards, high-scoring Richard Martin and either forward Ric Seiling or defenceman Bill Hajt to Toronto in exchange for goaltender Mike Palmateer and forwards Darryl Sittler and Dave Williams.

Sittler and Palmateer have been the subject of trade rumors for weeks.

Bowman scoffed at the suggested trade.

"There will be no trades between Toronto and Buffalo," he said. "I won't explain it."

Forsch lashes owners for stalling new pact

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Any attempt to start the 1980 major league baseball season without a new agreement would be destined to failure, says Bob Forsch, player representative of St. Louis Cardinals.

"I feel spring training will start on time, but I really don't think the players are going to play without a basic agreement," Forsch predicted. "The owners would like to believe the players' association isn't strong enough . . . but, for the owners to go on the premise that the players' association will break, that's hard to believe."

Forsch, 30, a six-year veteran pitcher, said he is opposed to greater compensation the owners are believed to be seeking for loss of free agents.

"In football, compensation doesn't work," he said. "They had over 100 free agents, and none of them got signed. Basketball has free agents, but the teams lose so much they're not gaining anything. I don't know why we have to give up our rights. The owners are the ones buying the players."

Forsch also expressed opposition to a salary scale which is believed to be an objective of the owners.

"The best example I can think of is when the Payson family sold controlling interest in their ball club (New York Mets). They didn't have a set price. They went out and negotiated with everybody," he said. "Why shouldn't a player get what he's worth?"

The Mets recently sold for $21 million.

Supporting Forsch's arguments, he said, are turnstile counts which have swollen steadily along with player salaries.

"From a fan appreciation point of view, there isn't anything wrong with baseball," he maintained. "They've set attendance records the last three years. The balance is good. The same teams aren't repeating year after year. Everything is working for the best of baseball."

Forsch, who hurled a no-hitter in 1978, said he relishes neither his unpopular role as a player rep nor the suspense created by the uncertainties ahead.

"There's nothing worse than sitting at home reading the paper and wondering if there's going to be spring training or wondering if there's going to be a season," he said. "Everybody gets a negative opinion of what the situation is."

Trimmed league begins season

Oak Bay Barbarians, Claremont Spartans, Stellys Stingers, Esquimalt Dockers and Reynolds Roadrunners all scored victories Wednesday as play got under way in the new-look Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Trimmed to 10 schools this year — St. Michael's University School and Spectrum have dropped out — the league will feature a nine-game schedule with the top four schools playing off for the Howard Russell Trophy and the next four competing for the Lt. Hodgkins Trophy.

Paul Russell, Peter Skillings and Neil Antolin scored tries and Antolin kicked a penalty goal as Oak Bay defeated Mt. Douglas Mountainmen, 15-9. Colin Agars booted three penalty goals for Mt. Doug.

With Dan Hammick scoring a try and kicking two conversions, Claremont downed Belmont Braves, 16-4. Jim Wakelyn and George Du Temple also scored tries for the Spartans and Bill Kennedy had a try for the Braves.

Reynolds made a strong second-half comeback to edge Parkland 12-10 with tries from Harold Thicke, Sam Bolinski and Bob Pack.

In the other two games, Esquimalt beat Vic High Titans 14-4 and Stelly's defeated Lambrick Park by the same score.

Stelly's had tries from Jay Purdy, Grant Feder and Brian Duncan and a conversion from Brett Elworthy while Dave Tindall crossed for the Lambrick try.

The second round of matches will be played next Wednesday afternoon.

Spectrum forces Stingers to work

Only one of the two games were close Wednesday night when action continued in the Greater Victoria high school girls' basketball league.

With Colleen McBeth scoring 23 points, Spectrum came within five points of Stelly's Stingers, going down, 68-63. Sandy Taylor was the top Stellys scorer with 27.

The other game was an easy 48-28 victory for Parkland over Reynolds. Nancy Duncan had 16 points for the winners while Marlene May led Reynolds with 12.

In a boys' high "AA" division makeup game, Oak Bay Bays defeated Spectrum, 58-42. Scoring was evenly spread for the Bays with Dean Straith getting 10 points. Ron Crabbe had 16 for Spectrum.

And in an "A" division game, Dunsmuir Demons, with 27 points from Tim Dean and 22 from Terry Kurvers, beat St. Michael's University School, 88-54. Top SMU scorer was Terry Berger-North with 18.

Taylor kicks beat tourists

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grahame Taylor's two penalty goals lifted University of British Columbia Thunderbirds to a 10-6 win over University of New South Wales in an exhibition rugby game Wednesday.

Taylor's second three-pointer came in the second half in the toughly-contested match after Birds, getting a try from Peter Mortifee, took a 7-3 first-half lead.

Burrows scores 46

DataTech and Ivys chalked up Senior "B" Men's Basketball League wins Wednesday night but while the former were making easy work of it, Ivys couldn't have cut it closer.

Getting a season-high 46 points from Bob Burrows, DataTech made it 11 wins in a row with a 100-76 victory over Trilec Seniors at Central Junior High School. John Gurvan scored 22 points for DataTech.

Over in the S.J.Willis Junior High gym, Ivys needed three points in the last eight seconds from Ian Scott to edge Victoria Athletics, 66-65. Scott finished with 21 points while Brian Sutherland-Brown had 14 points and Dave Morgan had 12. John McKay topped the Athletics' scoring with 14 points.

Stampeders anxious to retain Hufnagel

VANCOUVER (CP) — It appears British Columbia Lions won't get a chance to sign quarterback John Hufnagel of Calgary Stampeders after all.

Hufnagel played out his contract last season and the Lions have been interested in making a deal with Calgary, possibly offering wide receiver Al Charuk as bait.

"When the season finished I was certain it was just a matter of time before I was traded to another CFL team," Hufnagel said. "But I had a talk with Ardell (new coach Ardell Wiegandt) the other day and he told me he wanted me back."

Meanwhile, the Lions have signed Booker T. Brown, an offensive tackle released last season by Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the NFL. The six-foot, two-inch, 270-pound Brown is a six-year veteran of the NFL and World Football League.

Measure decides B.C. curling title

Times News Services

Joan Dexter of New Westminster drew to the 12-foot with her final rock in the 10th end Wednesday to edge the June Godberson rink of Fort St. John 5-4 and win the British Columbia women's curling championship at Prince George.

The winning shot required a measurement before the victory was confirmed.

Dexter, who lost her opening round game to Linda Moore of North Vancouver, won seven consecutive games to take the title.

Moore had a chance to force a playoff, but lost her final game 9-8 to Carol Klinck of Cranbrook in the second extra end to finish with a 6-2 record.

Moore, who fell behind 7-1 when Klinck scored seven on the fourth end, rallied to tie 8-8 after 10 ends. The 11th end was blanked and Klinck scored the winner with a last-shot takeout in the 12th.

At Calgary, Betty Jamison of Edmonton took the Alberta senior women's title with a 17-7 win over Jean Hugh of Calgary. Although games will continue today, no one can catch Jamison.

Barb Davis of Lethbridge moved closer to the Alberta women's championship in Calgary when she improved her record to 4-0 by defeating Faye Stewart of High Prairie 10-1 in six ends.

Jill Ferguson of Calgary, 3-1, is the only curler with a chance to catch Davis.

Two rinks from Edmonton and two from Calgary sharedthe lead in the Alberta men's playdowns after the first draw.

Edmonton's Danny Fink downed former Canadian champion Ed Lukowich, formerly of Medicine Hat and now of Calgary, 6-5 in 10 ends; Paul Devlin of Edmonton beat Mel Watchorn of Fairview 12-4 and Paul Gowsell of Calgary stole three in the 10th end to defeat Duncan Fraser of Grande Prairie, 7-3.

Pierce under the gun

The British Columbia men's curling championship begins in New Westminster's Royal City Club Friday with a key first-round matchup between defending champion Glen Pierce of Vancouver and perennial contender Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna.

Under a new format introduced this year — rinks now play for the Labatt Tankard under a new sponsorship — eight rinks are in the double-knockout provincial final, four from the Pacific Coast Curling Association and four from the B.C. (Interior) Curling Association.

The B.C. final formerly involved the top rink from each of the associations in a best-of-three series.

In other first-round games, Tim Horrigan of Victoria meets Bruce Young of Cranbrook, Gary Sigurdson of Vancouver goes against Eric Wiltzen of Kamloops (skipped by Tony Eberts) and Rick Pughe of New Westminster plays Wayne Laface of Vernon.

Pierce once again is under the gun. His rink survived several close calls in past weeks to avoid elimination from earlier competitions.

The B.C. champions advance to the Canadian championship, beginning March 2 in Calgary.

Al Wright of the host club will be back to defend his crown when the B.C. postal championships are held this weekend at Victoria Curling Club.

Wayne Bissell of the Racquet Club and Ivan Mollard of Oak Bay are the other Victorians competing in the eight-rink, double-loss elimination playdown which will produce a representative for the Canadian championship April 6-12 in Regina.

Play starts Saturday with draws at 7:30 a.m., 2 and 4 p.m.

Breathing room for Trident

Creditors of the financially-troubled Trident Aircraft Co. agreed Wednesday to extend outstanding claims of $7.5 million to the end of 1981.

A company spokesman said the delay will give the firm breathing room.

The company recently laid off 107 employees after the federal government refused to put any more money into Trident's plan to build a six-seat amphibious aircraft, known as the Trigull.

"We have five people working to find other sources of income," the spokesman said. "And we have key people standing by to make sure that we can get back into production as soon as the funds are released."

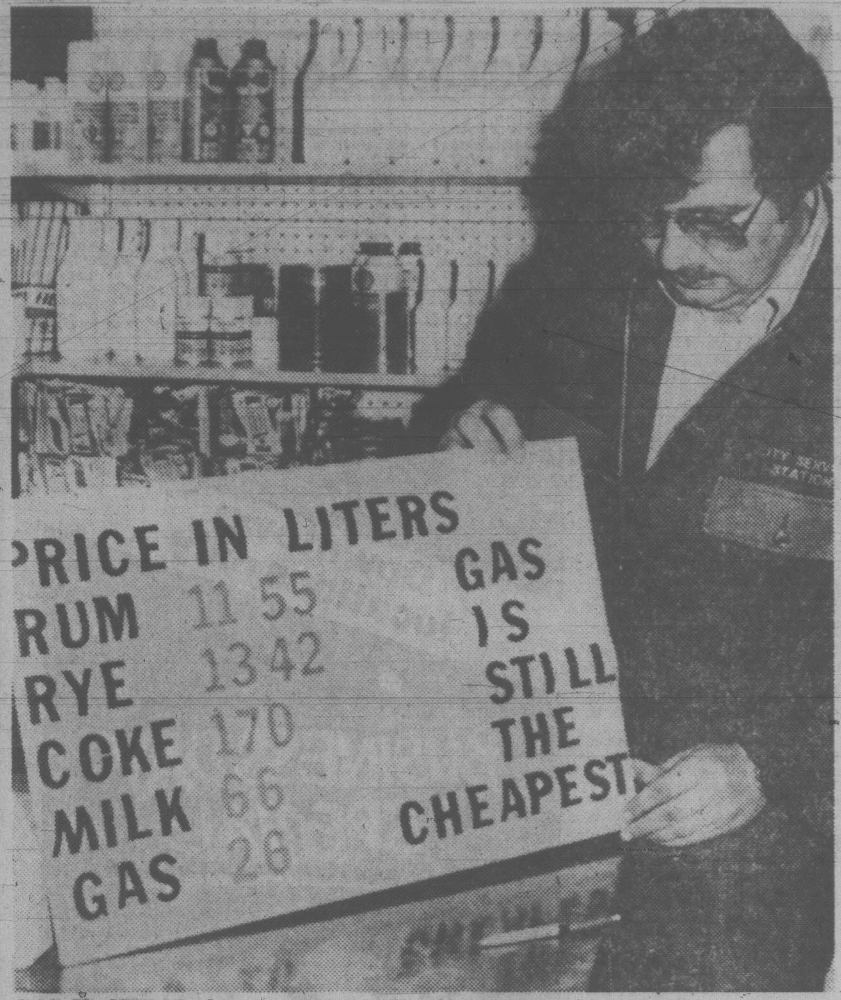
Work on the Trigull project has been halted, but the company is hopeful it can get some off the offset work to be available when the federal government awards a contract to build new fighter aircraft.

One of the creditors, the B.C. Development Corp., said earlier it is prepared to provide interim financing immediately after the federal election if the new government makes a commitment to restore the support the previous Liberal administration had promised.

Chairman Newell Morrison said the provincial-government corporation will need a written guarantee of reimbursement from the federal government before providing money.

The corporation has agreed to provide $4 million and shareholders $2 million if the federal government also comes up with $4 million.

The Conservatives say the operation is not financially viable. The Liberals and NDP have promised federal support.



GAS IS CHEAP, by comparison. Charlottetown service station proprietor Robert Cantwell thinks he can make a point with this sign he displays. The sign compares the price of gasoline with rum, another important source of Prince Edward Island's energy, and other consumer products.

Divide and conquer tactic hospitals' ploy: nurses

By MIKE HUGHES

B.C.'s major hospitals are using divide-and-conquer tactics in separate negotiations with registered nurses and other hospital employees, the nurses' association has charged.

Nora Paton, chief executive officer of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., Thursday also accused the Health Labor Relations Association (HLRA) of "double-dealing".

The charges were made in reference to reports about a tentative agreement between the HLRA and the 20,000-member Hospital Employees Union.

Paton said RNABC sources say practical nurses, represented by the HEU, have been offered a 28-per-cent increase over a two-year period beginning Jan. 1, 1980.

Yet the HLRA won't budge from an offer of a 21-percent increase over two years for the registered nurses, Paton added.

The HEU members are currently voting on the tentative agreement.

Talks between the 12,500 registered nurses and HLRA, bargaining agency for 113 hospitals, broke off Jan. 30 and a strike vote will be conducted Feb. 26.

An RNABC spokesman said Thursday he hopes the results will be known the next day.

Paton said the HLRA appears to be trying to pit the registered nurses against the HEU members "but they blew it."

She said the RNABC is not attacking the practical nurses but pointing out that their tentative agreement confirms RNABC members' clear and undeniable need for a major increase.

The RNABC has demanded an across-the-board, 18-per-cent increase over one year retroactive to Jan. 1 plus an economic catch-up that would vary with each nurse's experience and responsibility.

Paton said the registered nurses work in stressful situations that require exacting judgement, broad-based knowledge and complex skills.

"Given those circumstances, our members are grossly underpaid," she said.

The RNABC says the historical wage relationships in the hospital field are being eroded.

Malcolm Wilkinson, the RNABC's senior labor relations officer, said in 1969 starting registered nurses earned 34 per cent more than starting practical nurses but that 10 years later that differential has slipped to 15 per cent.

If the RNABC got the economic catch-up it seeks plus the 18 per cent, an RN's salary would go up 30 per cent to $1,711 a month from $1,305, the association says.

That would mean the differential between the practical and registered nurses would rise to 25 per cent.

Paton said RNABC members supervise the practical nurses and are responsible for monitoring patients' conditions and advising physicians of changes or needs.

"Our members are responsible for the lives and well-being of all hospital patients."

Vote on Saanich police quarters?

If Saanich ratepayers approve a new police building next November, it will be three or four years before it is built, Mayor Mel Couvelier told the police board Wednesday.

A referendum on the matter is a distinct possibility, Couvelier said, but any proposal for a new building is bound to come under fire from council.

"We don't have a council which is going to rubberstamp a new multi-million-dollar police building."

The mayor made his comments during debate on a $3,000 budget item for alterations to the former courtroom and courtroom foyer in the present Vernon Avenue police quarters.

The alterations will provide extra office space.

The courtroom was altered last year to provide a third committee room.

A report on future police needs is being being prepared by three board members who recently toured Ontario police buildings.

He didn't intend to kill or harm wife: accused

A 44-year-old painter-decorator told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Wednesday he lost his temper when he struck his estranged wife with a socket wrench but he didn't intend to kill her or cause her grievous bodily harm.

Kenneth Lucas Carter was testifying in his own defence in the third day of his trial on charges of attempting to murder his wife, Maureen, 40, and wounding her with intent as well as assault causing bodily harm to her friend, June Burns, in the latter's house just after midnight April 28.

The case was to go to the jury today after an address by Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan. Crown counsel George MacMinn and defence counsel Jeff Green gave their summations Wednesday.

Carter said he was very sorry for what happened and felt no hostility to his wife.

He said he returned to the matrimonial home March 30 and found a note from his wife saying she had left to sort things out. A little over two weeks later he got a telephone call from her saying she would like to talk and they did.

He said he got a bit emotional in the talk when he said he wanted her to only go out with him and not others. He said she was not too keen on that and would let him know.

Later, she told him she had an important meeting one evening and he said he was curious, drove to the Burns house and followed both women by car to a house in Colwood and later back to Victoria.

On April 27, he said, his daughter told him her mother was going away with a man to Hawaii or Vancouver and he felt frustrated, hurt and depressed.

(Mrs. Carter testified earlier she told her daughter she didn't care what she told her father but not to say where she was going. She said she didn't tell her daughter she was going to a Nanaimo restaurant for a belly dancing engagement because she was angry that he was using their daughter to spy on her).

"I guess I was feeling sorry for myself," said Carter, adding that he began to drink reasonably heavily for seven hours and left the apartment because he felt he had to talk to his wife.

"I intended, I hoped, I could ask my wife if she was going away with someone else and try to talk her out of it," he said.

He drove to the Burns house and parked his car in a curling rink parking lot nearby and walked to the house because if there was another man he might be in the house and he wanted to catch them together.

"I thought I've never met this guy before, as a form of protection, that I may be able to stop any incident, and I put the socket wrench in my pocket," he said.

The door was opened by Burns and his wife was inside. Burns left the living room and he said he told his wife "I hear you are going away with a man for the weekend."

He said she replied that she could be.

"She was very casual, couldn't care less. I guess I just lost my temper. I started to hit her," he said.

He said Burns grabbed him and he shook her off and pushed her away. He didn't recall Burns jumping on his back.

When he saw blood on his wife's hand, "that seemed to jar me back to my senses."

Carter said he cannot recall saying he would kill his wife, as she testified, but supposed it was possible.

Asked if said he would kill both women, he replied: "I do not deny it, I cannot recall it."

In cross-examination, he denied telling his wife that if she left him he would commit suicide. What he said was that he would have nothing to live for, he testified.

He said he didn't know his wife was at the Burns house but thought she might be. Asked if he expected to find a man with his wife, he said "well, yes, I did."

Asked if the wrench was to protect himself, he said it was "mainly to be used as a deterrent to any possible trouble. I went there to talk to my wife.

When asked if he expected violence, he replied: "I did not expect anything but I thought there could be violence."

Carter denied that he was in a jealous, angry rage but he was emotionally involved, feeling very hurt, having lost his wife of 20 years whom he loved.

"I guess it was a fit of anger," he said when he pulled out the wrench.

He said he first became aware of his anger when he saw blood on her hand and he stopped, not because of the arrival of Burns' son Kevin.

Asked if he struck Burns with the wrench, he said it was entirely possible but he was pretty certain he didn't because he had no reason.

He denied having any thoughts of killing anyone and no thoughts of roughing anyone up.

Before the judge

Judge Gilbert Hogg found a 19-year-old man guilty of dangerous driving and fined him $250 following a provincial court trial which began Monday and ended Wednesday.

Kenneth John Langlois, of CFB Esquimalt, was charged in connection with a head-on crash shortly after midnight June 21.

Testimony during the opening day of the two-day trial by an RCMP accident expert indicated Langlois' vehicle may have been going 92.8 km/h on Esquimalt Road near Dunsmuir. Sgt. Ralph Michael Fjermestad testified the critical speed beyond which a vehicle would begin to side-slip in the curve was 81.6 km/h.

In the accident, Langlois and Virginia McCord, 980 Wordsley, suffered serious injuries. The woman, who was coming home from working as a practical nurse at Victoria General Hospital, suffered broken ribs and jaw, and had her right kneecap removed.

Langlois said he was travelling between 72 and 80-km/h entering the corner. He said he had been up since 6 a.m. the previous day fighting a fire in Colwood. He also said his breathing apparatus collapsed and suffered smoke inhalation.

After that, Langlois said he went to the Junior Ranks Mess and had a number of beer between 7 p.m. and midnight, and was speeding to town for gas and food.

In his summation, defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming called that particular curve the "worst in the city, if not in British Columbia."

However, Mah Ming argued, the evidence fell short of dangerous driving and more along the line of careless driving.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan replied that the evidence established that Langlois was driving 22-to-30-km/h over the 50-km/h speed limit and that the only issue Hogg had to decide was that of negligence, inadvertent or advertent.

"Speed in itself cannot constitute dangerous driving," Judge Hogg stated. "But this corner, obviously, is a well-known, dangerous corner. It wasn't a momentary lapse on Langlois' part. He has offered nothing to explain why he took that corner at that speed other than he was in a hurry."

Two drivers were jailed for driving while suspended.

Victor Maurice Turchynski, 35, of Sidney, got a 30-day intermittent sentence.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Turchynski was stopped on Beacon Avenue in Sidney at 1:35 a.m. Aug. 17 for speeding.

He had been suspended since Sept. 24, 1976, following his fifth and sixth convictions for drinking-driving.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Bartleman had been previously convicted for driving with a blood-alcohol reading over .08 and for dangerous driving.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Catharine Ann Shortt, 24, of 1798 Elgin, $400; Daniel Windsor Worth, 17, of 960 Jenkins, $400; Sydney Mudie, 50, of 375 Arnot, $400; Clareen Booker, 37, of 3047 Balfour, $200; and Roland John Taylor, 48, of 423 Edward, $50.

In addition, Worth was fined $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and Taylor was ordered to perform 60 hours of community service work.

$100,000 settlement

An out-of-court settlement for $100,000 damages was reached Wednesday in the closing stages of a civil action for negligence.

The settlement was in favor of David Gordon Pellerin, 597 McKenzie, and against [illegible] Edward Harrison and JoAnne Patricia Harrison, driver and owner respectively of a vehicle in which Pellerin was a passenger.

The private settlement was announced to a B.C. Supreme Court jury by Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan in the third day of the trial.

Pellerin claimed the car was being driven negligently on Burnside Road on Dec. 11, 1978, and struck a power pole. He suffered various injuries including a ruptured spleen and a ruptured liver.

Kemano II concern to Fraser

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister John Fraser said Wednesday he plans to discuss the controversial Kemano II project with the B.C. government because he feels it involves "real environmental concerns."

Fraser said in a telephone interview from Port Alberni that he will contact B.C. Environment Minister Stephen Rogers as soon as possible and try to arrange a meeting.

"I'll tell him that I have real environmental concerns about this thing, Fraser said.

He was commenting on the $800 million Kemano II hydro electric project planned by the Aluminum Co. of Canada that would involve a dam on the Nanika River in northwestern B.C. and diversion of water via tunnels to the Kemano River.

Tentative accord reached at Hydro

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives for B.C. Hydro and its 3,700 clerical employees and technicians reached tentative agreement Wednesday on a new two-year collective agreement after a year of negotiations.

The deal between Hydro and the Office and Technical Employees Union, local 378, was based on recommendations by mediator Ken Albertini. Details of the pact, retroactive to April 1, 1979, were not released pending ratification by both sides, which will take up to three or four weeks.

Heinrich discusses firms' shift

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich met for several hours Tuesday with representatives of the United Steelworkers of America to discuss layoffs at two manufacturing plants, Windsor Machine Co. Ltd. of Langley and American Can Co. of Canada in Vancouver, caused by the companies shifting work out of the province. He did not divulge details of the discussion.

Barrett, hotel guests evacuated

TRAIL (CP) — About a dozen guests of the Crown Point Hotel, including provincial NDP leader Dave Barrett, were evacuated Tuesday night when fire destroyed an adjacent building containing a sporting goods store and an apartment. The guests were provided alternate accommodation.

Ferries concilation sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Merchant Service Guild is applying to the federal labor department for a conciliation officer to help break an impasse that has tied up CP Ferries' vessel Princess of Vancouver for a month. The stumbling block is the union's insistence that there be three seamen on watch to operate safely.

Pension bankruptcy looms: CA

By AB KENT

If Canadians want more retirement security tomorrow they'll have to give up more of the benefits they enjoy today, a leading accountant said here today.

Otherwise, said Kenneth Dye, 44, of Vancouver, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C., the price of indexing Canada Pensions to the cost of living spells bankruptcy for future taxpayers.

In an interview prior to addressing the Duncan Chamber of Commerce, Dye said the inflationary effect of indexing will produce a cost really too great to determine.

"We are underestimating the future cost of these pension liabilities," Dye said.

Pension funds remain largely undisclosed in financial statements and are not understood by the population.

The business world issues statements lacking comprehension and comparability while the pension plans pile up investments at a rate of $25 million daily, he said.

Most private pension planners maintain they can't afford the indexing of government plans, but they can't continue to ignore the erosion caused by inflation and must improve private plans, Dye said.

"If indexing comes to the private sector it will cause a real strain on corporate treasuries and if it doesn't come, the employees will continue to be very worried about their private plans."

Compared with the consumer price index, private pensions over the last decade have earned on average only 6.3 per cent, or .8 per cent less than inflation claimed.

The situation could arrest the trend toward early retirement.

"Workers cannot afford to retire . . . unless they have private means or are willing to starve."

One reason for the distress is that salaries in the last few years have escalated far beyond what most actuaries allowed for in their calculations when working out a contributory pension scheme.

Many pensions, Dye said, are based on the top-earning years of employment, and although larger than forecast, the pensions are smaller than reality dictates.

DYE
. . . must give to get

"I would say look again at the Canada Pension Plan and private plans. They've got to be brought closer together.

"Public plans are overgenerous — ransoming future taxpayers — and the private plans need more contributions.

"The average contributor is going to have to give up some other form of present-day benefit to make up for it. Maybe some of the dental plan, travel allowances."

Enormous surpluses in the plan have dwindled and "actuarial calculations indicate CPP will be in the hole by the end of this century."

H-centre bid studied

Health Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday he will review all suggestions about the Brannen Lake heroin treatment centre.

The Narconon Society of B.C. made a formal request to take over the centre following a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that the provincial government's compulsory heroin treatment program is unconstitutional.

"Obviously anybody who has any suggestions, whether it is Narconon or anybody else, those suggestions will be listened to," Mair said.

He said he doesn't know if Brannen Lake is for sale, and said it is premature to assume the government is going to dispose of it.

FAIR plan fair says Hewitt

Jim Hewitt, the minister responsible for the Insurance Corporation of B.C., Wednesday denied charges by a spokesman for a private insurance company that the provincial government is playing politics with ICBC.

"The government is acting for the public good," Hewitt said.

H. J. Saunders, manager of Zurich Insurance Co., which announced last week it will no longer insure private automobiles, has said he finds it hard to believe that a government which purports to favor private enterprise would bring in the FAIR program.

Saunders said basing insurance premiums on people's driving records only, instead of on their risk category, and requiring private companies to return in claim payouts 93 cents of every dollar collected in premiums, does not allow for fair competition between private companies and government.

"I can understand these concerns as a private enterprise individual," Hewitt said.

But he said he believes it is the government's responsibility to make sure all damage caused by motor vehicles is insured and that all policy holders are treated equally.

Pollution in limelight

WHITEDOG RESERVE, Ont. (CP) — The people of Whitedog Indian Reserve, a trouble-racked community of about 825 residents, have a chance to see themselves in a dramatic light tonight.

That's when a play, called Whitedog-Cat's Dance, has its first public performance. The full-length drama depicts aspects of past and present life on the reserve in Northwestern Ontario.

The production is by Theatre Max, a Guelph, Ont., company that spent two summers living on the reserve, collecting information on how the lives of residents have changed in recent years. Indian and white actors share the roles in the drama, which will be played out before reserve residents from the stage of a school auditorium.

The play, written by three persons and produced by Sidney Bruyn, artistic director of Theatre Max, deals with mercury pollution and other worries on the reserve 110 kilometres north of Kenora.

The reserve, whose problems range from alcoholism among adults to glue-sniffing by youngsters, was hit hard when mercury pollution was discovered a decade ago in the English-Wabigoon river system.

The "cat's dance" in the title refers to the erratic behavior first observed in the 1950s among cats in Minamata, Japan, that ate mercury-polluted fish. The affliction, known as Minamata disease, killed hundreds of people in Japan.

The discovery of mercury pollution in the English-Wabigoon river system led to the closing in 1970 of the river system to commercial fishing. The mercury was traced to discharges made from a chlor-alkali plant in Dryden, Ont., owned by Reed Paper Ltd.

The company replaced the system and later sold the plant, but some experts say it may be another 80 years before the river system is clean again. In the meantime, health officials advise that the fish are safe to eat in moderate quantities but not as a steady diet.

Menuhin: genius, humanist

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Any school child knows — or should know — that when Abou Ben Adhem asked the angel to inscribe him as "one that loves his fellow men" his name led all the rest.

Every age has probably had its Abou Ben Adhems. One of the twentieth century's most universally recognized is in Victoria this week; his name is Yehudi Menuhin.

The master violinist, conductor, humanitarian, profound thinker, writer, speaker, has been honored around the world and on many occasions, not only as one of the great virtuoso artists of all time, but as an activist dedicated through his music to many human causes.

Tonight he will be guest soloist with Paul Freeman and Victoria Symphony Orchestra at a sold-out concert at University Centre Auditorium.

Wednesday he performed with a pen in a lengthy autograph session at the Borogrove Bookstore on Centennial Square.

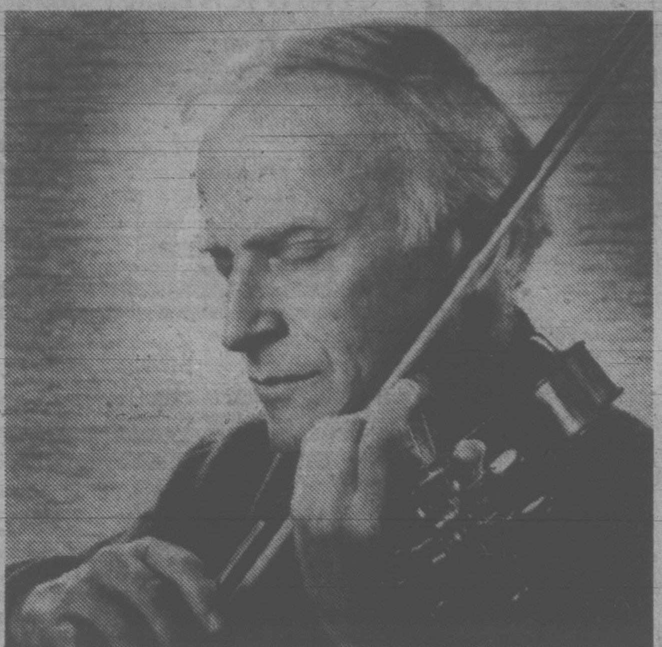
Some brought him small gifts; a yellow rose, an early camellia, books. He was obviously touched.

One elderly man had brought along a record to show him; a 78 made in early 1928 in Camden, N.J. Menuhin exclaimed over its pristine condition. "It's a treasure," said the man tucking it carefully away in its wrapping.

A small boy laid the large book carefully on the table. "I'm a violinist too," he explained. He said his name was David Thompson and displayed a splinted right thumb.

"You didn't do that playing the violin?" asked Menuhin seriously as he wrote a "To David" message in the book.

One forthright young woman protested the title even as she laid the book down for signature, pointing out that she had pasted a large-lettered "AND WOMAN" on the jacket and title page. Menuhin smiled and said he hoped most people would accept it in its comprehensive sense.



MENUHIN . . . dedicated to human causes

At the age of 63, Menuhin's enthusiasm is still at white heat, his smile quick, warm and genuine, his manner simple and direct.

He has lived and worked for various periods in many places. Yet if you call him a citizen of the world, he hesitates reflectively and you can almost hear him thinking that the title, from his viewpoint, is too grandiose.

Smiling, he says: "Well, I certainly am very comfortable in many different cities."

Reputed to be fluent in six languages, he admits to speaking French and German well but denies an equal ability in Russian, Spanish and Italian.

"I manage in Italian but my Spanish isn't good and I only read Russian," he says.

If you mention that he is unexcelled in command of that universal language, music, he agrees that he has probably communicated with more people more effectively that way than in any other.

During the Second World War, when he was in his twenties, he gave extensive concerts to entertain the troops — more than 500. In the 50s he raised over $74,000 for the famine fund in India and in the 70s founded a charity organization in Britain, France, the Netherlands and Switzerland that allows young musicians the opportunity to play for the public in schools, hospitals, prisons and other institutions.

When he was given the Nehru Peace Award in 1970, his services to humanity were expressed in the citation which read "for outstanding contribution and promotion of international fellowship, goodwill and friendship among peoples of the world through the medium of music."

On a close schedule, Menuhin is appearing in three Canadian cities — Victoria, Vancouver and Calgary. The rest of the tour that lasts through early April, takes him around the United States and Eastern Canada.

He loves living in London. "Musically it is the richest city in the world with its wealth of symphonies, chamber groups, operas and ballet companies. New York cannot compare with it," he says.

Nutritionist Dr. Nathan Pritikin says his diet will extend a devotee's life span by 10 years, and the state of Louisiana must agree. It's putting up $40,000 to finance a bid to put the whole town of Natchitoches on the high-fibre, low-cholesterol regimen. But Pritikin might have been better advised to impose his menu on an area not addicted to sauce piquante, crawfish and jambalaya — Cajun delicacies strictly forbidden. Certainly Gov. Edwin Edwards is a nonenthusiast: "I think I'd just as soon die 10 years earlier as eat that stuff."

Judy has bone cancer, and Ragucci is leading a fund-raiser on her behalf in Bennington, Vt., where Bo is costarring with Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Hopkins in Change of Seasons. Ragucci says he called her about the drive — that she said, "if my name can help, do whatever you want with it." Now, T-shirts sporting the famed name are going for $25 to $100.

Ex-TWA staff physician Dr. Scott Elberger has come up with a sure cure for jet lag. He says, in the March edition of Forum magazine, all an airline passenger has to do to insure a bright-eyed arrival at his destination are a few exercises — toe-touches, torso twists and the like — right there in his seat. Never mind that fellow passengers shy away — the idea is to keep the blood from "pooling" in lower extremities. He who would conquer jet lag also must avoid the smoking section and refuse coffee, tea, sweets and cocktails.

Ferdinand Muck says his apartment needs cleaning just as much as anybody's and a court in Karlsruhe, West Germany, agrees. So Muck now will get one day a month off work — with pay — to get the job done. Muck went to court when the hospital where he works turned down his application for a house-cleaning day — even though such requests routinely are granted under law to single women. Says Muck: "I never learned household work and cleaning my apartment takes me so long."

Dear Abby:

Two and a half years ago I married a lovely girl named Ramona. She was 20 and I was 26. It was the first marriage for both of us. On our honeymoon, Ramona was killed. (Thank God it wasn't my fault. Ramona was driving.)

I am getting married again. It will be the first marriage for Suzie. She wants a big wedding, which I really don't want. But, for her sake, we are having one.

As far as I'm concerned, I've already had my wedding gifts, so should I put a notation on the invitations saying, "No gifts," or what? My friends and relatives gave already, and once is enough. Or do you think I should leave it up to them?

After Ramona's funeral I asked everyone if they wanted their gifts back, and they all said no.

Also, should I send a wedding invitation to Ramona's folks? I haven't told them about Suzie yet. I can't get up the nerve since they are still grieving. Answer soon.

Getting Married

Dear Getting:

Don't put "no gifts" on your wedding invitations; leave it up to the guests. (Even though your friends and family gave once, this is Suzie's first marriage, and discouraging gifts would be unfair to her.)

Tell Ramona's folks personally — and soon. If they're still grieving, don't send them an invitation to your wedding. Good luck. I wish you joy.

Dear Abby:

Before my husband married me, he had a girlfriend who was the ultimate in charm.

Lest I forget, my mother-in-law reminds me.

Finally, one day, when I had it up to here, I said, "Listen, Barbara is gone, and I am here, so you can shut the hell up!"

My husband agrees that I am the injured party, but he wants me to apologize. But don't you think his mother was wrong in the first place?

Successor

Dear Successor:

She was wrong, but you were rude. Apologize.

Dear Abby: Bless you for saving not only my sanity, but my life.

A little more than a year ago you suggested I come to terms with a serious drinking problem and seek out Alcoholics Anonymous. It turned out not only to be a life-saver, but also an entirely new life and serenity I never knew before.

With my brothers and sisters in AA, I have learned I am not alone as I once so deeply felt. But most importantly, I have learned how to care for others and myself and maybe for the first time in my life, I know how to love another human being.

Thank you again for my life, Abby.

Recovering

Dear Recovering:

Don't thank me. I merely threw you a lifeline; You caught it!

'I learned to live with others'

By ALISON HARE

OTTAWA (CP) — "At first I thought it was just another silly government program," says Peter Splinter of Katimavik, the Canadian youth corps created three years ago by the federal government.

But when he finished high school in his home town of Edmonton he realized that "I had nothing specific to do — Katimavik was an opportunity and I decided to take it."

After 10 months of working with other young Canadians on community projects across the country, Splinter has had a change of heart about Katimavik.

For one thing, he says, he has become more tolerant.

"I learned I'm in this world with other people. I have to live with other people and accept them."

Splinter's comments are contained in a book called Have Them Build a Tower Together, by Jacques Hebert.

It's a collection of interviews with young people who participated in the first year of the program, and it candidly reflects both the good and bad of Katimavik.

Hebert admits that the interview form of the book plus the fact that he quoted only the first-year team — when the program was still feeling its way — was risky, especially considering the fact that Katimavik has always been sensitive to publicity that might diminish the public support on which it depends.

"All the elements of disaster were there — a staff that was inexperienced . . . work sites chosen in haste — without always taking into account all of Katimavik's objectives."

The book's release also came at a time when Hebert was trying to secure funding for Katimavik's fourth year.

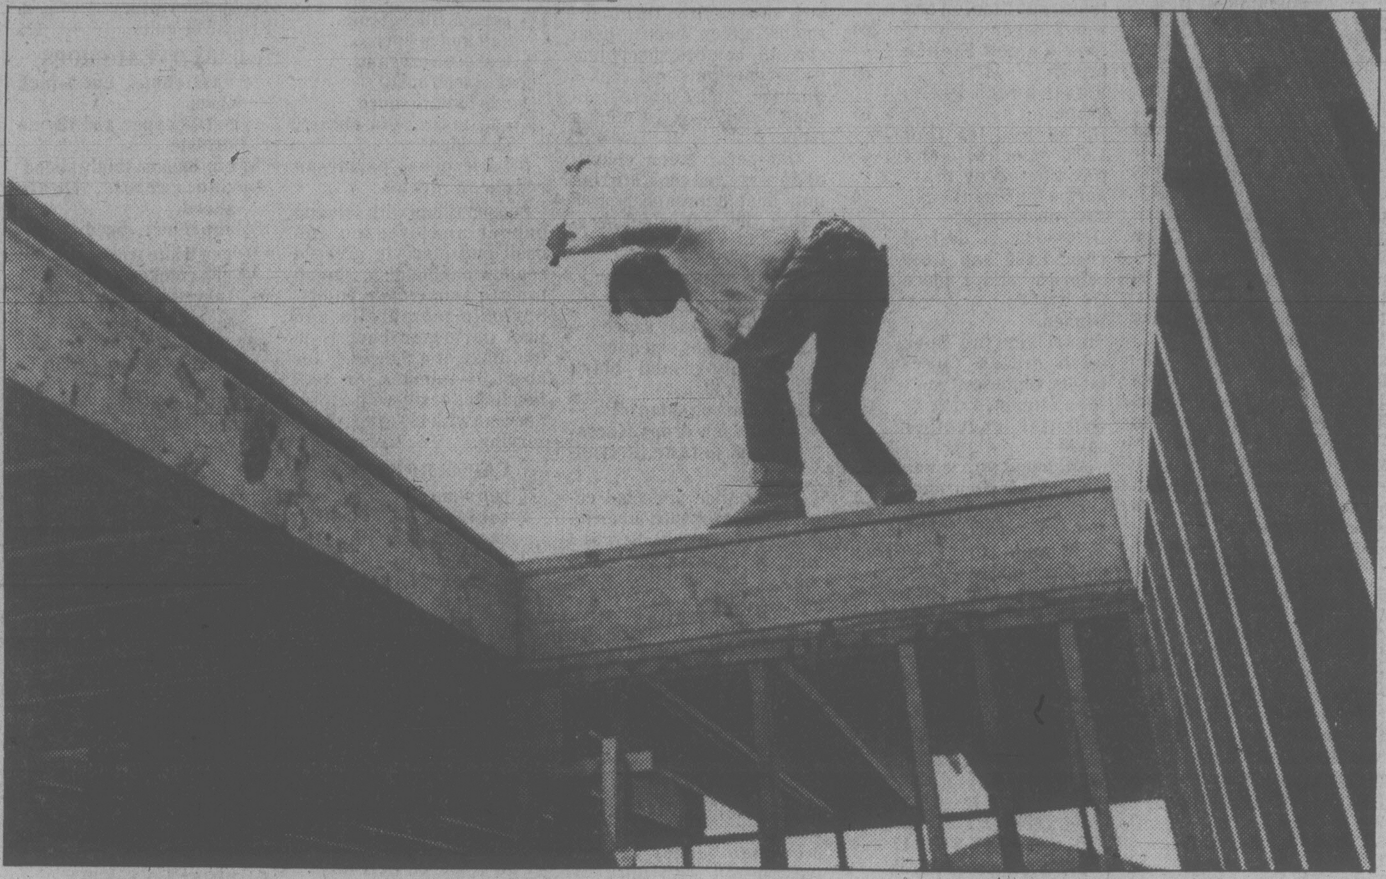
The Progressive Conservative government has since announced that it will transfer the Liberal-created program to the employment department from the treasury board and partially incorporate it into a new national youth service corps.

Hebert says the Conservative move is not a bad one if the aim is to centralize organization of youth programs. But the government has not indicated exactly how Katimavik will be affected, and Hebert is anxiously waiting to see what it is planning.

In 1979, with 1,600 people between 17 and 22 years of age participating in 85 projects across the country, the cost to the government was $11 million.

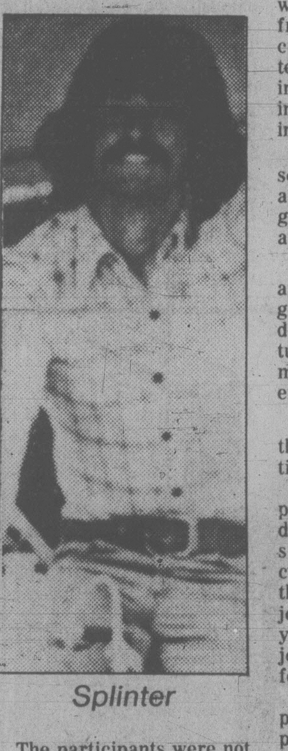
The program stresses group living, environmental awareness, alternative technologies and a conservation-minded lifestyle. Katimavik, which is the Inuit word for meeting place, also aims to help participants discover more about themselves, other people and Canada.

The 25 participants in Hebert's book spent time in Larouche, Que., Wilcox, Sask., and Grand River, Ont.



Katimavik's community involvement helped some participants drop superficial living values

Projects included designing and building a greenhouse, building a cafe for the older citizens of Wilcox, painting garbage cans, planting trees and working in day-care centres and homes for the aged.



Splinter

The participants were not paid a regular wage but received room and board, $1 a day and $1,000 when they completed the program.

And they said Katimavik changed them.

"I know myself a lot better than I did at the start," said Serge Maddedu of Montreal. "I discovered sides of myself I'd never suspected before."

Michael Match of Brockville, Ont., said:

"My friends have a hard time dealing with me now . . . I've been through all this changing and everything and I'm just starting to become something. These people are still so young. They have false happiness."

And Dorle Kneifel of Burnaby wondered how she would be able to relate to friends who still were preoccupied with cars and the latest fashions while she was interested in travelling, buying a piece of land and studying forestry.

Others became more conscious about eating habits and turned, in varying degrees, towards natural foods and vegetarianism.

The mixture of English- and French-Canadians in the group left them with an understanding of different cultures, and at the end of 10 months most were fairly fluent in a second language.

As Hebert had anticipated, there were criticisms of Katimavik.

One project that required participants to mass-produce picnic tables for a conservation authority was criticized by some who thought that, contrary to objectives of Katimavik, the youths were taking away jobs from the local labor force.

However, one of the main problems for the participants seemed to be in adjusting to living in small groups where interaction with others was constant and privacy hard to come by.

And while Katimavik changed them, the intensity of group living sometimes made the process abrupt and startling.

As Bruce Young of Saskatoon put it: "For me it was an experience I could learn from but I hope I never see it again.

"I have had a lot of my philosophies and ideas knocked down, really beaten out."

Not 'way of life?'

LONDON (UPI) — Some things just are not done in polite British society and one of them is breastfeeding a baby in London's most luxurious department store.

Anna Bowman, 31, learned that lesson last week when she tried to breastfeed her 5-month-old son while she and her friends had tea in the Way In cafe in Harrod's.

"I couldn't believe my ears," said Mrs. Bowman, a council member for the Camden Borough of London after she was asked to leave. "I thought that sort of attitude went out years ago.

"I think it's very unfair that you can't have a cup of tea while you are feeding your baby."

Mrs. Bowman said she has breastfed her son in other restaurants, on the London subway, on buses and even at Camden Council meetings.

"As far as I could see, the only people who were upset were the staff," she said Wednesday. "I don't think any of the customers complained. Most of them didn't notice anyway."

A spokesman for Harrods, the store that advertises itself as a "way of life" for Londoners, defended the decision to evict Mrs. Bowman.

"The supervisor was carrying out her instructions," he said.

"We have this policy because health authorities discourage breastfeeding in restaurants. Apart from that, it can be very embarrassing for customers."

Proctitis linked to use of antibiotics

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

I would very much appreciate any information concerning proctitis. I understand there is limited knowledge about its cause and cure.

Mrs. K.F

Dear Mrs. F.:

Proctitis is an inflammation or infection of the inner lining of the rectal area. As a matter of fact, there is much known about proctitis.

The rectal discomfort associated with diarrhea may be accompanied by blood and mucus. There are a number of germs and fungi that can be responsible for proctitis. In recent years, a great many cases have been attributed to the use of broad spectrum antibiotics. In sensitive people this can be a very annoying sequel to their use.

Parasitic infections and amebic infections can also cause proctitis.

When the condition is not treated actively, the mucous membrane lining can develop ulcers and polyps. Hemorrhoids, fissures and fistulas of the rectal area can accompany the condition.

Cultures of the area can reveal the nature of the offending germ. Sometimes, biopsies of the lining of the rectum are taken to further help in the diagnosis.

Treatment is devoted to finding the underlying cause. Sometimes it takes arduous study and cooperation between the doctor and the patient to pinpoint the cause. Cortico-steroids, used in suppository form or in retention enemas, are very effective. Sulfa drugs, taken by mouth, are also used. Special drugs to reduce the spasm and diarrhea are part of the treatment.

Because it takes such active treatment, patients sometimes become careless and do not rigidly follow instructions. This serves only to perpetuate the condition and invite complications.

Dear Doctor:

I am 22-years-old. I have a stomach ulcer. On special occasions I feel awkward about going to parties with friends or relatives because I have to ask for a drink of soda rather than an alcoholic beverage. Is there any type of liquor that is mild for the stomach and will not cause any discomfort or upset?

Miss K.C.

Dear Miss C.:

The mature way to handle such a problem is to avoid liquor, beer or alcohol in any form. It's hardly worth the risk to your health to take a chance with any alcoholic beverage.

It is well-known that ulcers of the stomach can be made worse by even the mildest alcoholic content of wines and liqueurs.

Today, there are many people in social groups who, for many reasons, are sipping plain club soda with perhaps a twist of lemon.

STIR-FRY PORK CHINESE-STYLE

1 teaspoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg white
2½ cups lean pork, trimmed and sliced
2 tablespoons oil
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 cup mushrooms, drained
1 cup frozen green beans, partially cooked
1 cup sliced Chinese cabbage
½ cup bean sprouts, blanched (or canned, drained)
½ cup canned bamboo shoots, drained
4 water chestnuts, sliced
3 green onions, sliced
1 tablespoon sherry

Combine cornstarch, salt and egg white. Toss pork in mixture to coat. Heat oil. Add pork and stir until it begins to brown and is cooked through. Remove. Add garlic and brown. Add soy sauce. Stir in mushrooms, green beans, bean sprouts, bamboo shoots and water chestnuts and cook 2 minutes. Add Chinese cabbage, cover, cook one minute longer.

Tailoring lifts size 52 morale

CALGARY (CP) — No dress in the world can hide the fact that a woman is a size 52, says Louise Allan, a Calgary dressmaker who designs fashions for fatties.

But, she adds, if that dress is well tailored and of top quality fabric it will still do wonders for the weighty woman's morale.

Allan, who moved to Calgary from Quebec 13 years ago, says she was struck by the number of overweight women she saw in Alberta.

"I could see there was a huge market here," she says with a chuckle.

She maintains that clothing manufacturers don't design stylish ensembles for the larger set. Her customers complain that there are few available alternatives to the polyester pantsuit that bags and sags after only a few washings.

Allan says that even though there's no way to disguise a weight problem, there are plenty of tricks of the design trade that can minimize the effect.

She often puts a single slightly off-centre seam in a contrasting color down the front of a dress. She uses raglan rather than inset sleeves — they fit rounded shoulders better. And her styles are feminine, but always tailored since extra frills only add bulk.

The dressmaker says any custom-made garment is going to be more expensive than one off the rack.

And her customers must pay even more because "the cost of the fabric alone is often double."

Although Allan can't make her customers "look like Greta Garbo," she notes that the garment that makes the client "feel comfortable and good about herself" is regarded as a success.

TOMMY DUNN is not an embittered man — though you might expect him to be. Dunn, a 30-year-old Belle River, Ontario resident who's worked at a Bendix Corp. plant in Windsor for more than 11 years, was told recently he has inoperable cancer. Doctors who found tumors in his chest told Dun that the cancer contained traces of asbestos fibres, and the Workers' Compensation Board is currently studying a union report linking the recent deaths of five Bendix employees to asbestos used to make brake linings by the firm. But despite the news, Dunn's outlook has remained positive.

'Death is as natural as babies and love'

MONTREAL (CP) — "Everybody knows we're born to die. We're all going to die . . . . Any age is right if God determines it that way."

Mike Charette, 22, died of cancer last spring, a week after speaking these words in front of a film crew.

Charette is one of the stars in a film just released by the National Film Board called The Last Days of Living. His co-stars are a dozen patients dying of cancer at Royal Victoria Hospital, along with their families and the staff of the hospital's "palliative care unit."

The film's objective is to show hospital staff, families of the dying and those of us afraid of our mortality that death is not frightening if we face it openly.

Its message is that death is a part of life, like love between people, the changing seasons and newborn babies, and that it should be treated as such.

Emotional scenes of patients with other patients, their families and hospital workers show that, when the end is near, only one thing matters: relationships with others.

Money, awards, business deals — whatever was gained materially — become unimportant.

"Dying made me more aware of the importance of people and their feelings," said Mike. "Before, it was get what you can while you can."

When Mike returned home from the hospital to die, his father Gilles was hesitant at first about entering Mike's bedroom.

Gradually he relaxed with his son, treating Mike as he wanted to be treated — with the usual talk and jokes. Gilles talks in the film about coming to know his son more intimately than he ever believed possible.

On the morning of Mike's last day, Gilles helped his weakened son to bathe head to foot. When he was clean, Mike impulsively kissed his father on the neck and said, "Daddy, I love you."

Gilles later recalls how touched he was to hear these words from a masculine 22-year-old. "It was really wonderful."

Family members of patients in the film said they grew from their experience of coping with death, sometimes emerging with different priorities in their lives.

"I know now that we should enjoy every minute, never mind every day, of our lives," said Louise Bleau-Palladini, whose mother died hours after she was filmed celebrating Mother's Day with her family.

Louise plans to return to the palliative care unit as a volunteer.

Few friends of patients appear in the film. It seems that friends often feel awkward and afraid in the face of death and they disappear, treating the dying as if they are already gone at a time when their friendship is needed more than ever.

Malca Gillson, an NFB veteran with more than 20 years of film experience, directed The Last Days of Living, spending a month and a half as a nurse's aide in the palliative care unit to prepare herself in advance.

The Royal Victoria unit was founded in 1975 by Dr. Balfour Mount, based on the premise that people dying of cancer had a right to palliative care — that is, care without healing.

There are no attempts at recovery forced on the patients. Most have already undergone chemotherapy and radiation treatment. So the staff of the 13-bed unit concentrates on making the patients as comfortable as possible.

Pain is controlled by judicious use of narcotics. Most patients receive an individualized dose of a morphine-based mixture that is intended to take away their pain while leaving them alert.

The team of specially trained doctors, nurses, social workers, psychologists, clergymen and volunteers works at supporting the patients — talking readily, sharing hobbies, helping celebrate birthdays, joining in other activities.

The film, about an hour long, is scheduled for showing at six medical conferences this year. Negotiations are under way for it to appear on television.

Read this and weep

NEW YORK (NYT) — Alone among animals in the ability to shed tears of sorrow, human beings may use crying as a safety valve for ridding their bodies of chemicals produced in distress.

This new explanation of emotional tears, proposed by William Frey, a biochemist in the Department of Psychiatry at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Centre in Minnesota, could explain why tears wept in anguish have a different chemical composition from those shed in response to irritations such as cold, wind or dust. The theory also suggests that the anti-crying socialization of North American men may be dangerous to their health.

That emotional tears are not the same as tears cried over onions was first observed in 1957 by the chemist Robert Brunish, who found a lower concentration of protein in tears produced by irritation. Today, with more sensitive analytical tools and a deeper knowledge of the role of chemicals in emotion, Frey and his colleagues hope to detect the shades of difference separating tears of joy, laughter, anxiety, depression, grief and anger.

"We know that stress alters the body's chemical balance," Frey said in a telephone interview. "A great deal of research has been done to determine the biochemical correlates of emotion, particularly in the blood and urine. But these are terribly complex fluids, receiving material from all the body organ systems. Tears should be easier to study."

Working with volunteers, Frey induces weeping by showing sad movies like Brian's Song, a tear-jerker so potent that half the subjects wept despite experimental conditions that included having to cry into a test tube.

As the study progresses, Frey will collect tears from other emotional and physiological states, and hopes to describe his findings in the American Journal of Ophthalmology.

At Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, researchers interested in using tears to diagnose systemic diseases recently developed a new technique for collecting them from nonweeping individuals. Dr. R. Linsy Farris, an ophthalmologist, and his former student, Dr. Jeffrey P. Gilbard, say their technique, which involves a fine, hollow glass collecting rod, is painless compared with the strips of filter papernow used.

In the interview, Frey suggested that stress-related diseases such as peptic ulcers, which are more common in men, may be aggravated by the suppression of tears. Now that more women are entering the work world, Frey said, they may show an increased rate of these diseases. Alternatively, if they maintain their readiness to cry, they could avoid risk.

"Personally, I think the home is probably more stressful than the office," Frey said.

Graveyard shift appeals to few

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — While many areas of the job market get tougher to penetrate these days, there's at least one occupation with plenty of vacancies — cemetery work.

It's a wide-open field, says John Howard, 45, "because the job title turns off 90 per cent of the people."

Howard, manager of the Cataraqui cemetary here, was born and raised in a London graveyard where his father was superintendent. He says he never had trouble getting summer jobs during his school days and found no competition when he applied for his present job two years ago.

For the former carpenter, the Kingston position was like a homecoming.

"It's not a gruesome job and no two days are ever the same," he says.

"Most of the work is landscaping and subdividing. It's similar to building a subdivision with streets, walks and trees — except you don't need any sanitary sewers for obvious reasons."

Howard, his wife and three daughters live in the superintendent's cottage right on the cemetery grounds. It doesn't bother the girls, but then, Howard notes, they've spent so much time visiting their grandfather's house that they are used to the surroundings.

Daddy's occupation hasn't prevented the Howard girls from making friends since they came to Kingston. The only problem, Howard says, is that their sleep-overs aren't a big hit.

TORONTO (CP) — What used to be no man's land is now changing with more men turning their hands to the culinary arts.

Motivated by circumstances such as separation or divorce, economics or enthusiasm, men are entering what has traditionally been a woman's place.

"The number of men in my cooking courses has tripled," said Lucy Waverman, who operates a cooking school in Toronto. "The largest number of these men are separated, but I have a lot of couples taking courses. They want to cook together in the kitchen."

Male enrolment in night cooking courses at George Brown College has doubled in the last four years, said Brian Cooper, academic chairman of the hospitality program.

"Four years ago the ratio was 75 females to 25 males. Now the classes are just about even, 50-50 female and male."

Pearl Geneen, owner of a kitchen boutique, said that few men shopped in her store 10 years ago.

"In recent years my male customers have tripled," she said. "The men buy utensils and equipment for performance. They tend to buy better quality than women."

Men are stepping up to the counter — both in the kitchen boutique and in the kitchen — for several reasons.

With the increase in families in which both parents work, men must share the cooking chores. Bachelors have little choice.

In any event, many have discovered the joy of cooking and have enrolled in courses to increase their skills.

When real estate broker Garth Hazlett's wife died in a car crash five years ago, he didn't even know how to operate the stove.

"I remember counting 28 dials," he said. "It was formidable. I had grown up at a boarding school, my wife had always cooked. My girls were nine and 10. I couldn't tell the difference between baking and broiling."

Hazlett, 45, said that at first, he and his daughters ate in restaurants.

"But that had to stop. Not because of money, but because we had difficulty getting our three schedules organized. Eating out took too much time."

Hazlett said his greatest difficulty was a lack of confidence. His earliest failures revolved around getting all parts of a meal — potatoes, vegetables and meat — cooked at the same time.

Hamburgers and steaks were his earliest successes but Hazlett said his girls got tired of them and the fried foods he was mastering.

He enrolled in a six-night cooking course, learned some fundamental techniques and overcame his lack of confidence. Now, he cooks dinner five nights a week and packs school lunches.

Puppet calms hospital nerves

Charlie is a puppet with a difference — he's designed to show children how medical equipment works.

He has a removable skin graft, a tube for intravenous feeding, and a mock heart-monitoring device.

Charlie began his medical career at the Izaak Walton Killam Hospital for Children in Halifax.

The hospital has since constructed 17 other puppets with a number of built-in demonstration features.

One of these puppets even has a cutaway chest, to show kids how the lungs and heart work.

Charlie is the creation of Ron Wagner, half of the husband-and-wife team that makes up the Halifax-based Merrytime Clown and Puppet Co.

Kids find it easy to talk to Charlie, a big-mouthed, fuzzy-haired, hand-operated puppet who is about the size of a small child.

Wagner, who started making the puppets to meet requests of child workers and medical personnel, says several hospitals are interested in them.

He said puppets can help alleviate the traumas that children may experience "from having people do whatever they want with their bodies."

Wagner also said a puppet, particularly a life-size one, can prompt youngsters to "talk out" their fears, and children who can express what they're feeling tend to recover faster.

The clowning doesn't only help kids. It also relieves parents who get "bored and can do nothing but feel the suffering of their children."

Wagner, who has no medical training, said hospitals, until recently, have not paid much attention to the "the non-medical, play aspect of the child's life."

Wagner and his wife were in Winnipeg to present a puppet show for kids and parents called, Step Right Up, Ladies and Jellybeans.

Hitting high C a sour note?

"Coughs and sneezes spread diseases." Now that the freezing weather is here again, sales of cold remedies are soaring. So are the sales of vitamin C. Millions of Canadians have the idea that by gulping large doses of this vitamin, they'll avoid the common cold or, at the very least, vitamin C will cure it.

But, there's no proof that high doses do anything against colds. In fact, large doses of Vitamin C may, cause some adverse effects.

Vitamin C is one of the most controversial and discussed vitamins. We've been asked "what will it do for me?", "How much sshould I be taking?", "Does it prevent or cure colds?" Many of these questions are still being debated and there're simply no definite answers.

We do know that it is an essential vitamin and it's easily obtained from several food sources such as oranges, cantaloupes, grapefruit, strawberries, broccoli, spinach, plain and sweet potatoes, raw cabbage and tomato juice.

Nobel Prize-winning doctor, Linus Pauling's 1970 Vitamin C and the Common Cold, skyrocketed that vitamin into instant fame (and fortune for vitamin supplement manufacturers). Mom's chicken soup was relegated to second place.

In Canada, tests were done to prove or disapprove Pauling's theory that large doses of vitamin C influenced common colds. Some volunteers were given 250 milligrams each day. Others given one, two, four or eight grams a day. A control group was given a placebo. Those taking vitamin C supplements did have fewer days of illness than those on the placebo. But, those given the large doses of vitamin C didn't fare any better than those who were on the 250 milligram dose! (In order to get 250 milligrams a day, you don't need to take supplements.

Two cups of orange juice, 2½ cups of citaminized apple juice or two stalks of broccoli, will do it.) Massive doses of vitamin C therefore made no difference in the number of winter illnesses — but did apparently lessen the severity, somewhat.

A California study got a lot of press when it showed that vitamin C is necessary for resistance to disease. Guinea pigs fed diets low in vitamin C had fewer disease fighting globins than animals given normal amounts of vitamin C. Such studies are often interpreted to mean that if you took extra large amounts of vitamin C, you'd be extra disease-resistant. NOT SO! In fact one recent study showed that while 250 milligrams of vitamin C a day increased resistance to disease, two grams a day actually decreased it.

Of course, vitamin C is an important nutrient. It is needed to help form a very specific protein — collagen. This protein binds bells together the same way mortar is used to bind bricks. If collagen is not properly formed, bones don't develop as well, wounds don't heal, and bleeding occurs first in the gums then under the skin on the arms. Vitamin C deficiency leads to a disease called scurvy. If the condition is untreated, death may occur. In the 18th century, Dr. James Lind discovered that eating two oranges or one lemon daily cured scurvy. Before that discovery, over half the crew of a ship could expect to die of it. Lemons, (then called limes), became standard rations on ships — even today, Englishmen are still called "limey's.

The old adage "if a little is good, more is better" simply isn't true with vitamin C. The body uses only the amount it needs and the rest is excreted in the urine. (North Americans are often accused of having the most expensive urine in the world!)

Paradoxically, if you take too much vitamin C nd stop suddenly, you may end up with a deficiency! As we said, you excrete the extra vitamin C your body can't absorb. If you stop taking vitamin C suddenly, large amounts are still excreted for some time and you end up vitamin C deficient.

Too often, people, confused over the question of vitamin C's ffectiveness in treating colds, take large doses regularly "just in case." Watch it! Little is known aoout the side effects. Large or excessive doses may cause serious problems: interference with proper measurement of glucose in diabetics, make diagnosis of liver disease difficult and increase risk of kidney stones.

Should you or should you not take supplements containing large amounts of vitamin C? We think you should get the amount you need naturally by eating fruit and vegetables. Massive doses may have some benefits but they also may have risks. Why take a chance?

Special from the Sun

It is a sign that says "Kelly's Scrap Metal." To Kellington, who lost his business two years ago, it is a reminder at election time that the politicians are lying when they talk about a better life for Canadians.

"If I thought I could keep everyone away from the polls, I would be out there running across this country to do it," he says.

From the shack at Oppenheimer Park, it is a 20-minute bus ride to the Bar Centrale on Commercial Drive, where Joe Biasi and his friends discuss the election over steaming cups of capuccino. They are working men in their late 20s and early 30s.

The prime minister, says Biasi, is not impressive.

This is the federal riding of Vancouver East, home to the working class and the out-of-work, where politicians are judged harshly.

For 39 years the riding elected socialist MPs from the NDP and its forerunner, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. Then, in 1974, Liberal Art Lee won the riding by 57 votes over the NDP's Paddy Neale.

Margaret Mitchell recovered Vancouver East for the NDP in last spring's election, defeating the Liberal incumbent by fewer than 1,400 votes. But Lee and Mitchell are running again, and there is no predicting who will take the riding Feb. 18.

Other candidates in the riding are Progressive Conservative Dave Kilbey, Fred Wilson of the Communist party of Canada, Randy Little of the Rhinoceros party and Paul Tetrault of the Workers Communist party.

Two days of interviews in the stores, homes and streets of Vancouver East are not enough to project statistically the election's outcome, only enough to get a hint of the mood in this riding, where Conservatives are almost as rare as undecided voters, where more than three languages are needed to talk to the residents.

But of those who made thoughtful comments, 13 said they will vote NDP and 12 identified themselves as Liberal. Five others said they will vote Conservative. Two more were either undecided or unwilling to say how they will vote.

The bulk of the riding is in the northeast corner of the city, bounded by Main and Broadway and stretching from Skid Road and Chinatown to the tidy homes of Vancouver's East End.

The riding boundaries also go south from Broadway and Fraser to 16th and west to Oak to include a chunk of apartment territory around the city hall and the eastern half of False Creek.

ELECTION 80

On a weekday morning, there are plenty of people to talk to on Cordova and Powell east of Main. Most are men, and all say they are out of work.

Like Norman Lind, who sits soaking up the winter sunshine on the steps of St. James Anglican Church, those who will say how they are voting this time support the NDP.

"They've had a chance to sit back and see the mistakes everyone else has made, so, hopefully, they'll do the opposite," he says.

Lind, 48, doesn't know much about the local candidates and didn't vote in the last election. "I was probably on a drunk that day," he says.

One block away at Oppenheimer Park the men sit one per bench, lost in thought. Ross Runciman puts down his newspaper to make an observation about the prime minister's image problem. The 31-year-old man, dressed like a logger from boots to toque, says he was once a prospector for gold and silver, but now is on welfare.

"When I first saw Joe Clark, [illegible] derstood, because I'm a country boy, too, eh." he says. "He's a country boy trying to do an executive's job."

The windows to the caretaker's shack nearby are covered with heavy wire mesh. The shades are pulled down. Inside the warm kitchen, where a purple shirt hangs like a curtain over one window, Kellington puts down a cup of weak coffee to roll a cigarette. He is keeping his vote secret, except for the comment that he has "never liked the Liberals."

"My business is my business. The politicians will find out on election day, no sooner," he says.

In the rows of tidy houses much further east on Pender, NDP lawn signs — and no other kind — dot the landscape.

A middle-aged woman walking down Adanac says she is on her way to Mitchell's headquarters with a $20 donation. An old man out for a walk says he's voting NDP because "I'm an old-age pensioner and they're the only ones who have ever done anything for us."

At Frank's Barber Shop at 806 Renfrew, Franco Delia interrupts a haircut to talk politics.

Delia is a Liberal; his customers votes Tory. But they agree on one thing: It's hard to take any of the candidates seriously when they keep breaking their promises.

"Fewer promises and more action," says Delia, shaking a comb at the mirror on the opposite wall, to which he addresses his remarks. "We don't believe any of them anymore."

On Pender east of Main, every shop window bears a poster urging voters in Englih and Chinese to "return Art Lee to Ottawa."

Talking to the residents here and to Italian and East Indian residents elsewhere in the east end is a problem for an English-speaking reporter.

In Le Kiu Importing Co. at 262 East Pender, a store clerk, when asked his opinion on the election, instead leads the reporter to the back of the store and offers a bag of monosodium glutamate.

Once the misunderstanding is sorted out, the clerk, 39-year-old Paul Chong, says through a bilingual coworker that he is voting for Lee because "he is Chinese and we are Chinese . . . we'd vote for him no matter what party he is in."

The "Art Lee" vote, is distinct from a Liberal vote, is not confined to the Chinese community.

At the nearby Oppenheimer Lodge for senior citizens and the handicapped, Art McClure says the Liberal candidate earned his vote by minding the grassroots — unlike Lee's NDP predecessor.

With Neale, says McClure, "we never see him from one day to the next . . . but Lee's not ashamed to come down to this district — he comes down here and listens to you."

In the Italian restaurants and coffee bars on Commercial Drive, Clark's leadership — or lack of it — is ridiculed by men who seem to demand a macho demeanor from their prime minister.

Sneers a young trucker in the Bar Centrale: "Clark? He isn't a man. He doesn't look like one and he doesn't act like one." But Trudeau: "He's got guts — look at all he's gone through politically and personally."

But the last word, one of fear and of sympathy, goes to a middle-aged woman in the Mount Pleasant public library who would not say how she will vote. An immigrant from Yugoslavia, she remembers the Second World War and life in prison camps and fears the world is on the brink of another disaster.

"Whoever wins will have a very, very tough job. I feel sorry for him, to tell you the truth," she says. "In this world of ours, you see flame all around. All around."

Double track vowed

SMITHERS (CP) — A Progressive Conservative government would see that Canadian National Railways installs a double-track system from a point near the Alberta-B.C. border to the West Coast port of Prince Rupert, says Frank Oberle, Conservative candidate in Prince George-Peace River.

Oberle, Conservative member in the last House, said Wednesday the move would be part of a Conservative government's plan to increase grain exports to nearly 30 million tonnes by 1985.

Oberle said his party is serious about increasing exports and $250 million has already been committed to new port facilities at Prince Rupert.

He did not speculate on how much it would cost to double-track the more than 1,000 kilometres of CNR line between Tete Jaune, near Jasper National Park, and Prince Rupert.

Conservative candidates scoffed at Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau when he said recently that a Liberal government would have CNR double-track its line from Winnipeg to Vancouver at an estimated cost of $800 million. A number of candidates and farm spokesmen called Trudeau's double-tracking plan unnecessary for improved movement of grain.

Handicapped to get rebate

OTTAWA (CP) — Handicapped persons will receive a full rebate from the 5.5 cents a litre (25 cents a gallon) excise tax on transportation fuels if the Tory budget becomes law, Finance Minister John Crosbie said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Crosbie said the exemption — which had not been specified in the Dec. 11 budget — was an oversight. A clarification was issued by the minister's office Wednesday.

Most want noose: police

EDMONTON (CP) — Tear-jerking journalism has produced a silent majority so vengeful they probably want the lash reintroduced, says the president of the Alberta Police Association.

Detective Norm Koch says most people he talks to during election campaigns are more vengeful towards criminals than are policemen who campaign for the return of capital punishment.

"They react to what they read and hear, not to what they experience," he said in an interview. "They go by what the media pushes, especially if it's a real tear-jerker of a story."

Koch, who also heads the Edmonton Police Association, said police want voters to question their candidates on capital punishment. The national police association wants it returned for premeditated murder and murder committed during a crime such as robbery.

Included would be most killings of police and jail guards but Koch said his group is not "waving any flags" about murders in those two areas.

"We are hired to do a job and we know the ball game. I get my back up more over bestial killings like some woman being raped and then murdered."

But he said if police start feeling they have no protection under the law, they could get violent in their own protection.

"There is no other means (than capital punishment) of controlling criminals (intent on killing). There is a strong feeling in society that there has to be a penalty for the ultimate act of murder."

Koch said police are simply asking voters to make capital punishment an issue in the election.

Failures bared: NDP

HUMBOLDT, Sask. (CP) — Canadians now are turning to the New Democratic Party because they have had a good chance to see the shortcomings of Liberal and Progressive Conservative governments back to back, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent says.

"Eleven years with Mr. Trudeau was difficult enough for Canada. Seven months with Mr. Clark wasn't anything worse and the people of Canada know it," he told this small Saskatchewan community.

Heckler helps Clark make point

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark turned some sprightly heckling to partisan advantage Wednesday by diverting from his speech on energy policy to attack Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau.

In his address to an overflow crowd of more than 2,500 in Peterborough's armories building, Clark encountered constant heckling.

To one woman who demanded to know what the Tory government would do to provide jobs, Clark replied that he planned to reintroduce federal programs from his defeated December budget designed to help women find work.

Another woman stopped Clark short in his speech by saying she wanted to ask him a direct question on unemployment.

"I'm prepared to answer a few questions," the prime minister replied, "but I don't want a debate. If I wanted a debate, I'd go out and look for Pierre Elliott Trudeau."

Clark then told the woman that he would continue funding for the federal outreach program and tax incentives to allow employers to deduct salaries for their spouses.

"Now that I have answered your question, I wish you luck in your efforts to put the question to Pierre Trudeau," Clark concluded, earning huge applause.

In his speech, Clark admitted his controversial 18-cent-per-gallon increase in the excise tax on gasoline was unpopular, but that Canadians would still pay less for gasoline than Americans if the tax was implemented.

"Energy self-sufficiency costs money," he said. "Even when we introduce the 18 cents . . . it still costs 25 cents a gallon less than what people in Rochester or Syracuse pay."

Clark said the tax, part of a comprehensive oil policy aimed at Canada ending dependency on foreign oil supplies, was still not enough to cover the cost of subsidizing imported oil to eastern Canada.

"Not all that is popular . . . but that is where we stand on energy pricing," he said.

Clark repeated his warning that the Liberals under Trudeau were promising gasoline rationing. "But, we don't need rationing," the prime minister said. "We need to rely on self-sufficiency for Canada."

In Peterborough, Clark campaigned for rookie Conservative MP Bill Domm, who edged out former Liberal Indian Affairs minister Hugh Faulkner in last May's general election. Faulkner, who held the seat for the Liberals since 1968, is not running again but both parties consider the riding crucial to their campaigns. Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau visited the city last week in hopes of recapturing the seat.

Tory party a lemon: Trudeau

Times News Services

KAMLOOPS — Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau continued to take potshots at Prime Minister Clark Wednesday, comparing the Conservative government to a lemon used car.

He charged the Tories "had a fair chance to govern but they blew it." Trudeau said the Clark government was a "lemon" and it was time to get rid of it.

"The question is, what is a fair chance after we have seen what they have done in six months to our international reputation ... to our economy, and to our pocketbooks," Trudeau said.

"I think if a person takes his car to an auto dealer to turn in his old car and buy a new one and then drives it around for a few days and finds the steering is wobbly, the breaks are unsure and the pistons are shooting oil, he would go back to the dealer and say he has been sold a lemon."

Trudeau told a subdued audience that "you don't have to drive a car six months or six years to know if it is a lemon."

In another analogy, Trudeau said a man who bought a horse and found it was "lame, had the heaves and had gotten worms, he would get rid of it," rather than riding it around for another year.

He also attacked Clark for initially excluding B.C. Tory MP John Fraser from his inner cabinet.

He said his own former environment minister, Len Marchand, did not have to knock on his door to make his views known.

Marchand was beaten last year in the Kamloops-Shuswap riding and has decided not to run this time.

A tour of a paper mill and a luncheon rally had been scheduled in Prince George today. Liberal strategists were trying to revise their plans.

Before he arrived in Kamloops, Trudeau stepped up his attack against the "bumbling and incompetent" Clark government, in a speech to 250 supporters at a luncheon in Edmonton.

He said "the silent 21 Alberta MPs and the five Tory MPs from Edmonton" didn't even raise their voices, thus betraying westerners when Clark introduced a budget that included an energy excise tax that would have boosted heating bills for Alberta farmers by $2,000 by 1982.

"The western army of Conservative MPs have ignored the needs of the West ... while the corporal guard" of only three western Liberals have looked after westerners, he said.

Trudeau also charged that Clark's promise to put a "fresh face on federalism" had turned into a red face because the Tory leader still didn't have a final oil-pricing agreement with Alberta.

Throughout the day, Trudeau continued to promise that a Liberal governement would wipe out the 18-cent gasoline excise tax included in the Tory budget, work out a fair oil-pricing agreement with Alberta and increase the guaranteed income supplement for needy senior citizens by $35 a month.

Soviet spy claims absurd says expelled Canadian

Gold . . . charges absurd

OTTAWA (CP) — Col. Harold Gold, a Canadian military attache just kicked out of the Soviet Union, says Soviet claims he was spying are absurd.

Gold, who returned with his wife to an emotional reunion with his children Wednesday, said in an interview he "can't even really dignify them (the Soviet claims) by elaborating on the situation."

The Soviet government informed the Canadian Embassy a week ago that Gold would have to leave within a week. The Soviet move followed the Jan. 21 expulsion of three Soviet military officers attached to the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has promised to retaliate for Gold's expulsion.

The Canadian military attache said he has noticed a "general hardening of attitude" in Moscow since the recent Soviet incursion in Afghanistan — signs of a return to the Cold War. However, there was nothing specific yet, beyond a change in atmosphere.

The Soviet order to leave Moscow "came out of the blue," said Gold, a quiet, graying man.

"They called it espionage," he said of the reasons the Russians mentioned for expelling him. He had not been told of any alleged spying incident.

His job was to collect information on Soviet military forces but "only within the accepted norms that military attaches adhere to."

"We don't get information by covert means at all. That isn't one of the acceptable things for military attaches."

The Soviet officials ordered out of Canada recently were accused of buying classified information from an American citizen for more than $10,000.

Gold said he and his wife Vera are "extremely disappointed" they had to leave Moscow after only six months.

The Golds were posted to Moscow for two years and had spent a year preparing for the posting, including Russian language training.

"To spend only six months in the country is quite a letdown," he said. "I wasn't ready to come home yet. I think I can say the same for my wife."

He said he was happy to see Canada and his children again.

Que. teachers vow to defy law

QUEBEC (CP) — A march on the Quebec national assembly by more than 20,000 striking teachers ended peacefully Wednesday, with the teachers pledging they would defy any back-to-work law imposed by the Parti Quebecois government.

"We want a satisfactory negotiated contract," said Robert Gaulin, president of the Centrale de l'Enseignement du Quebec teachers union, told the throng from a platform outside the assembly building.

Across the street, Parizeau and Morin sat around the circular cabinet table with other members of Premier Rene Levesque's cabinet, as they decided what steps they will take to end the strike by the 73,000 teachers.

The teachers have been off the job since Monday of last week, closing elementary and secondary schools in the French Catholic and English Protestant sectors.

Police burned papers Keable inquiry told

MONTREAL (UPC) — Terrorist documents allegedly were ordered destroyed by a Montreal policeman to prevent them from being located by a provincial inquiry into police activities, according to testimony at the inquiry.

Carole Devault, a self-described police informant, testified Wednesday that in December, 1978, her main police contact, Lt. Det. Julien Giguere, asked her uncle, in whose home she had stored the documents, to destroy them.

The papers included plans for making a bomb, original communiques from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and FLQ letterhead stationery, she told the inquiry headed by lawyer Jean Keable.

"Giguere knew these papers were stored at my uncle's home and told me it would not be interesting for the Keable inquiry to get their hands on them," said Miss Devault, cross-examined by Montreal police attorney Guy Lafrance.

"I told Giguere I wouldn't call my uncle — because we'd had an argument — and ask him to destroy the documents," Miss Devault testified.

"Giguere said he would call my uncle," she added. "Ten minutes later, he (Giguere) called me back saying he had told my uncle his name was 'Adolf' and that he was my friend.

"Giguere said he told my uncle to destroy the documents or else the police would go get them," she said.

In previous testimony, she said her role she informed on the FLQ since the early 1970s, at the peak of the terrorist underground group's activities.

Miss Devault said she forewarned Giguere an FLQ cell would threaten to blow up an Air Canada plane in November, 1971, unless the federal government deposited $200,000 in FLQ member Jacques Lanctot's bank account in Cuba, where he was in exile at the time.

The Nov. 19, 1971 threat proved to be false.

Giguere was scheduled to testify next week.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass	Pass	3♡
Pass	4♡

Opening lead — king of spades.

The highest compliment one can pay a card player is to say that he sees through the opponents' cards — and the number of hands where a declarer can live up to this billing is truly astonishing. In many deals he can arrange the play so that the defenders finish in exactly the same position as if they had voluntarily shown declarer all their cards.

Consider this hand where West cashed two high spades before shifting to the jack of diamonds. South won with the king, noting that there were two more losers — a diamond and a club. Although the club trick could be saved with a successful finesse, declarer decided that on the bidding the likelihood of East's having the king was virtually nil.

So, rather than stake his hopes on a club finesse, South adopted a far more promising line of play. After playing a trump to the king and ruffing a spade, he led three more rounds of trumps to produce this position:

North

West
♣K 10

East
◇Q 7

♣A Q

Now South led his last trump and West, who could not afford to part with a spade or a club, released a diamond. Declarer thereupon led a diamond to the ace and returned the nine of spades, discarding his diamond loser. West had to win with the jack and return a club, thus putting a neat end to a well-played hand.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, February 8, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You learn where the money is and how to obtain it. Cooperation with partner, mate or close associate is required. Cancer, Capricorn natives figure prominently. Tie loose ends, accent security and obtain valid appraisals of possessions, property.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Attend social event, avoid clashes in connection with politics and religion. One who smiles to your face may actually be setting a trap. Know it and act accordingly. Be positive of legal position, check rights and permissions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be familiar with basic material, do your "homework," check signals with one who shares your interests or employment. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominently. You'll be asked to revise a memo or manuscript.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on love, creative touch, significant changes, travel and intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play featured roles. Young person desires to open dialogue. Know it and be receptive. Harmony can replace dissention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on details, fine points, direct statements, challenges and basic security. Your position is stronger than might be anticipated. Know it, be confident, realize that delay or confinement is temporary. Family member makes conciliatory gestures.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Define terms, make inquiries, let others know you are versatile and available for assignment. Relatives, short trips, examination of ideas are on agenda. Bring priorities into focus. Another Virgo, a Leo and a Pisces play key roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have unusual opportunity to live up to potential. Challenge, added responsibility, money and love are part of exciting scenario. One who "applies pressure" may actually be doing you a favor. Know it and respond accordingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll be at right place at right time; what originally seemed an impossible task will be successfully completed. Aries, Libra individuals figure prominently. Be direct, independent and "creatively selfish." You'll understand!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make new starts in new directions — you are "released" from obligation. Period of confinement is finished. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. You are due to meet a "very important" individual. Cupid could be at work!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on emotional responses, friendship that is transformed into "meaningful relationship." You are pulled in two directions simultaneously; key is to gather and examine material. Another Capricorn and a Cancer figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your request for challenge, opportunity is granted. Superior is willing to make room for you at more elevated position. Have facts, figures at hand. You'll be asked to verify a statement. Be frank, to the point and avoid frills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Review ambitions, perceive potential, open lines of communication. Emphasis on distance, travel, education, publishing and major legal decision. Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Circumstances will dictate a revision of plans.

IF FEBRUARY 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are intense, creative, passionate and stubborn. You are a determined person who seldom leaves a task before it is completed. Members of opposite sex can be afraid of you and fascinated at the same time. You are sincere, dedicated and often give impression of being arrogant. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. July will be your most significant month of 1980, a year featuring greater independence, fresh starts and love.

Soviets offer Olympic aid

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — The Soviet Union will give financial aid to nearly 60 developing nations in Asia, Africa and Latin America so they can send athletes and officials to the Moscow Olympic Games this summer, the top Soviet Olympic official told a news conference here Wednesday.

Some teams from poorer countries will have also their transportation fares and lodging expenses paid by the Soviet Union, said Vitaly Smirnov, president of the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee. Smirnov is also a second vice president of the International Olympic Committee.

The total cost of the subsidies to the Soviet Union, he said, would be about $2.8 million.

Smirnov was visiting Mexico to discuss Soviet aid to developing nations with Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Association of National Olympic Committees, who said earlier this week that he had requested such assistance from the Soviet Union during an Olympic planning meeting nearly 18 months ago.

"Soviet sports organizations, as a result of conversations about 18 months ago with various developing countries, have agreed to offer assistance to almost 60 countries from Africa, Asia and Latin America," Smirnov said.

"This assistance will take the form of reductions in transport of Aeroflot (the Soviet airline) to Moscow and in accommodation at the Olympic Village."

Smirnov did not name the countries that would receive the Soviet aid. But Guilhermo Montoya Sanchez, Secretary General of the Mexican National Olympic Committee, told the Los Angeles Times that many countries in the western hemisphere would probably be included.

The United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Argentina, Brazil and Chile are the only Western Hemisphere nations to not seek such assistance, Montoya Sanchez said.

Montoya Sanchez added that Smirnov had come to Mexico specifically to give details of the proposed Soviet aid program to Vazquez so that it could be passed unofficially to each national Olympic committee. Immediately after Wednesday's news conference, Smirnov flew to the United States to attend an International Olympic Committee meeting at Lake Placid, N.Y.

During the news conference, Smirnov condemned the United States' plans for an Olympic boycott to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"I reject the whole idea of the boycott," he said. "It would ruin the international Olympic movement. The Olympic rules prohibit countries from refusing to take part for political, religious or social reasons."

Smirnov, who repeatedly referred to Olympic rules and "the Olympic spirit," was asked at one point if the Soviet action in Afghanistan did not constitute a violation of the Olympic spirit. He avoid replying directly to the question, but said the U.S plan to organize a boycott was "a very brusque violation of the rules of the Olympic charter and of the Olympic spirit."

Meanwhile in Lake Placid, N.Y., Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Wednesday that this weekend's session of the IOC would be one of the most critical in the existence of the Olympic Games, alluding to the boycott move.

"I would say this is one of the most critical sessions of the IOC since the Sorbonne in 1894," said the Irish peer, 66, serving the last year of an eight-year term as president. It was in 1894 that the Games were reorganized after having been dormant for centuries.

The U.S. Olympic Committee is to present the IOC with President Carter's proposal that the 1980 Summer Olympics be moved from Moscow, postponed or cancelled unless the Soviets withdraw their troops from Afghanistan.

Of the 89 IOC members, 76 are expected to attend this weekend's general sessions. That is far greater attendance than might normally be expected for a session preceding the Winter Games.

Canada's IOC representatives are Dick Pound and James Worrall.

Pound said recently he would attend the Lake Placid meetings with an open mind and, if a resolution dealing with a boycott were tabled, he would use his best judgment in voting.

Ottawa asks Montreal to assess Olympic site

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government has contacted the Olympic installations board to inquire about the possible use of Montreal's Olympic facilities this summer, board president Robert Nelson confirmed Wednesday.

But he said the board has not been asked to prepare a full-fledged feasibility report on whether the facilities could be made ready if the Moscow Games are moved or boycotted by Western nations. And he couldn't say how much it might cost to hold any international events here.

Nelson said in an interview that an official from the privy council in Ottawa had asked the board two weeks ago about the Montreal Expos' contract for summer rental of the Olympic Stadium and the current state of the facilities.

"We only answered their questions," he said. "The talks went no further."

Jean-Yves Perron, another board official, said Ottawa had asked whether the board would be willing to collaborate in preparing the facilities for use this summer, or at least in conducting a feasibility study.

"We said yes, but have not been asked to do so," Perron said.

Earlier this week, Premier Rene Levesque complained Ottawa was not consulting the provincial government on the question of holding Olympic events here. Prime Minister Clark responded that there had been exploratory talks involving federal officials, the City of Montreal and the Olympic installations board, the Quebec government agency which runs the main Olympic facilities.

Gerry Snyder, a city councillor and close adviser of Mayor Jean Drapeau, has said the only contact the city had with Ottawa was a brief and informal conversation between Drapeau and Clark more than a month ago.

Until Wednesday, the Olympic installations board had denied entering into contact with federal authorities.

The question is important, since the provincial government would likely demand that Ottawa foot the bill for any Olympic events held here. The province and the City of Montreal are still paying off a $900-million debt left over from the 1976 Games.

In addition, there have been indications that Premier Levesque might make an issue of the Olympics in the referendum on Quebec independence this spring. He has complained that Ottawa is "parachuting" a second Olympics into Montreal without prior consultation.

Prime Minister Clark has said he would prefer that the International Olympic Committee move the entire 1980 Games from Moscow to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. If international sports officials decide to leave the Games in Moscow, Clark wants Canada to join the United States and other countries in boycotting the Olympics.

OIL TANKERS

DON MUNRO SAYS:

"I will continue to promote the overland route, although the final decision is in the hands of the U.S.A.

"Whichever route is chosen, we must take steps NOW to protect our environment in every possible way.

"If, for example, the sea route is chosen, I will continue the fight for higher standards of safety and air-sea rescue, and will commence work immediately to ensure adequate bonds are placed on the oil tankers and that sufficient insurance protection is provided against oil spills.

"Broadbent's recently announced statement to ban oil tankers is naive and ludicruous!"

RV park plan would bring tourist dollars to Victoria

A revived proposal to build a civic recreational vehicle park in Victoria West was received favorably today by the city's tourism committee.

Two representatives of the Dogwood Trailer Club told the committee last summer an average of 450 recreational vehicles came to Victoria daily on the three ferries, but there is such a shortage of space that most of them left Victoria the same day.

Charlie Cameron said there is space for only 407 RVs in the whole capital region, (not including Goldstream Park) and many of these spaces are occupied on a long-term basis.

The Dogwood club proposed that the city open a trailer park on Wilson Street for short-term, overnight stays. It would have minimal facilities, water and a connection with city sewer lines so drivers could dump their holding tanks.

Ald. Ron McKenzie told the committee that Robbins Parking Services Ltd. is interested in the proposal. Robbins would pay any costs of preparing the park on city property and pay the city a portion of the revenues from the park.

Cameron said that now many RVs have to park on Dallas Road or Clover Point. Many others simply drive straight up Island. If the city could lure them into staying, it would mean considerable revenue for Victoria businesses.

He said that minimal expenditures by RV owners would be $40 a day.

"I'm totally sympathetic," said Ald. Frank Carson. "I've done a bit of trailering and even North Battleford has more space than we do."

Ald. Gretchen Brewin had another suggestion. She said there are many parking lots around the Legislative Buildings which are empty after 5 p.m. and could be used. Now they just park on the side streets of James Bay, she said.

The committee voted to refer the matter to the city administration for recommendations on establishing the trailer park.

No appeal on Indian sales tax

The provincial government has decided not to challenge a B.C. Appeal Court ruling that status Indians living on reserves are not required to pay sales tax on electricity and gas purchased from B.C. Hydro.

"We accept the appeal court judgment as definitive," Attorney-General Allan Williams said today.

The government now is considering whether it is legally obligated to repay taxes improperly levied on status Indians over the years, the minister said.

However, the government and Hydro have no idea how much sales tax may have been collected illegally.

The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs estimates the amount at $20 million while a government spokesman, who did not want to be identified, says it is far less.

But Williams said no one knows for sure because Hydro records don't show which customers were status Indians and which weren't.

UBCIC president George Manuel has said his group will take the government to court if the money isn't paid back.

If the government decides the money must be paid back, Hydro faces the job of sorting through years of records to determine who is entitled to a refund.

But Williams said it would be done.

309 IN MEMORIAN

CAPTAIN - Jim, In loving memory of a dear father who passed away Feb. 7th, 1978.
Tonight the stars are shining on a lonely silent grave,
Where sleep and dreamy slumber one, we loved but could not save.
In sadness we saw your sinking,
We watched you fade away.
Our hearts were almost broken,
You fought so hard to stay.
But when we saw you sleeping,
so peacefully, free from pain.
We could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.
Loved and always remembered by son Ted and family.

CRAWFORD - Cherished memories of Samuel, (Sammy) Beloved husband, father and grandfather, who passed away Feb. 11th, 1976.
Ever remembered, sadly missed, Ethel & family.

MITCHELL - In loving memory of a dear son, Allan, February 8, 1979.
O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
The joys we shared together
Are the memories we hold dear,
And the happiness you gave us
Keeps you forever near.
You never really left us
Nor have you travelled far,
Just entered God's beautiful garden
Sadly missed Mother and Stuart and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Novelty vegetables worth trying gardening

jack beastall

We vegetable gardeners can become quite set in our ways, growing the same things year after year and ignoring new introductions which are often superior in quality and food value.

In this way, we differ from the flower gardeners, for they are constantly seeking something new in color or form.

Very little compares with watching a new vegetable develop. It satisfies our gambling instinct and broadens our knowledge at the same time.

The gamble is whether it will, or will not, succeed in the local climate. If the first attempt is unsuccessful, but indicates the plant has merits, there is a tremendous satisfaction in planning a way to achieve greater success the following year.

It is unfortunate so many highly recommended but unusual vegetables should be listed in seed catalogues as "a novely for the home gardener".

In common usage today, a novelty is considered as something new, superficially attractive, and generally of little value. But in the seed catalogues the dictionary definition is applied: "fresh or new, a change or innovation, a new article of trade". Whether it has value is something the purchaser must decide.

To shun a vegetable because it is listed as a novelty is unreasonable; whenever we select a new variety of any vegetable we are working with a novelty as far as we are concerned.

The value of a novelty cannot be judged by the experiences of another gardener, since the micro-climate and the soil in his garden may differ considerably from our own, and his reaction could be biased.

Heat-loving varieties, which dominate the list of vegetables virtually unknown to local gardeners, will develop better in a low lying garden which traps summer heat than in a garden by salt water or exposed to winds on a hill where average summer temperatures are lower. But the low lying gardens have the disadvantage of the late spring frosts which must be avoided by sowing the seed indoors and transplanting to the open garden around late June.

Working a low lying southwestern slope I find that outdoor sowings of okra, sweet pepper, and eggplant are annoyingly slow until late July into August. Progress is then rapid, but a mid-September frost can ruin the plants before many fruits have been picked.

The solution has been to sow the seed indoors and grow the plants in pots until around mid-June, then transplant to an open deep coldframe in full sun that will give protection from cold winds and act as a heat trap. Covers are used only on cold nights. In this way the three heat loving vegetables mentioned give a satisfactory crop and are easily protected from an early frost, thus lengthening their cropping period.

Any enclosure of shiplap 45 to 60 cms high makes a heat trap, but watering cannot be done with a sprinkler nor can a driving rain provide adequate moisture. Careful hand watering is needed to avoid sudden chilling of the warm soil.

An area on the side of a building facing south or southwest is good for experimenting with novelties. The reflected heat from the wall of the building raises the temperature several degrees, often just the number of degrees needed for success. Windscreens of sacking, wood, or plastic film can be erected at the corners of the building to lessen cold draughts on plants and soil.

Man has always feared the unknown, but fear is not a valid reason for avoiding unknown plants. The worst that can happen is poor results the first year. But the experience gained, plus a little ingenuity, could mean the discovery of a high quality addtion to the family diet.

Forestry jobless too high: IWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — An economist with the International Woodworkers of America says statistics compiled by the industry in January show an unacceptable level of unemployment.

Doug Smyth, an economist with the union's western Canadian regional council No. 1 in Vancouver, said Wednesday he strongly disagrees with some statements made by forest industry officials that the level of layoffs were normal for the time of year.

A survey of 40 companies done Jan. 15 by Forest Industrial Relations Ltd. shows 7,587 workers were unemployed in forest manufacturing or logging in B.C. because of seasonal or marketing conditions, about one-quarter of the 29,067 workers normally employed by the 40 companies responding to the survey.

Of those out of work, 878 were off the job because of market conditions, 5,586 were off because of seasonal logging layoffs, 935 were without work because of seasonal manufacturing layoffs and 188 off because of "technological change."

But the survey says 125 of the 188 were off because the B.C. Railway strike and an additional 17 were off because of a permanent closure of a sawmill.

It was the first such survey done by the industrial relations company.

Smyth said statistics compiled by the union Jan. 7 showed 7,916 forest workers were laid off with 6,882 of them on the West Coast.

It's difficult to say what a normal level of unemployment is because the forest industry is a victim of cyclical markets and unpredictable seasonal factors, he said, but the union feels the level of unemployment in January was much too high.

Savage prison riot predictable, experts say

By LOIS TIMNICK
Los Angeles Times

The savagery of the uprising at the New Mexico State Penitentiary, in which 33 inmates were killed, has stunned and horrified the public.

But violence experts say that both the riot and the savagery that accompanied it were predictable and understandable.

The brutal violence that erupted between inmates, but largely spared the guards, was probably begun by a handful of pathologically disturbed prisoners and then escalated in a kind of macho oneupmanship, said Dr. Frank Ervin, a psychiatrist at McGill University in Montreal who is an expert on violence:

"These people lacked the normal controls — because of drug intoxication like 'angel dust,' structural brain lesions or psychotic thought disorders that cause a person to see the world differently — that order behavior, including violent behavior, and limit how far it is appropriate to go — even when you've decided to kill."

Several drugs, including amphetamines, were found in the prison after the riot, and at least several inmates died of drug overdoses. The prison pharmacy had been sacked, and contraband drugs are thought to have been available as well.

Several prisoners were either beheaded, impaled on pipes, burned with a blowtorch, castrated or had their eyes gouged out.

Ervin and several other psychiatrists interviewed by the Los Angeles Times suggested that once the riot started, it spread to men who participated in group acts that they would not do as individuals, even as individual criminals. Such a phenomenon is known as mob psychology.

The rage attached to such activity got translated into really hurting the victims, not merely making a clean kill, speculated Dr. John Lion, director of the University of Maryland's clinical research program for violent behavior in Baltimore.

Dr. J. Wesson Ashford, a psychiatrist at the University of California in Los Angeles (UCLA).

Angry, crazy people who know how to kill and see nothing wrong with it, already lack internal controls and are held in check only by external controls, which were destroyed early on in the New Mexico riot, Wesson said.

Under such circumstances, nothing matters but "getting back at those who've done them wrong and establishng dominance like a monkey troop gone wild."

Attacking fellow inmates rather than guards is logical, according to Dr. Lion. Not only are they more available, but tremendous emotional attachments are formed in prisons — homosexual liaisons, jealousies, internal power struggles with clear leaders and followers.

UCLA's Ashford added that the guards tend to be regarded as father figures. "When you get angry and frustrated," he said, "you don't beat up your father, you take it out on your brothers and sisters. It's competitive sibling rivalry."

Dr. Saul Faerstein, a University of Southern California psychiatrist and a consultant to the California parole board, said the prison gangs can't be eliminated: "But there is less fighting over turf and space if you can keep them apart. When you have too many chickens in the coop they start pecking at each other." Animal studies have shown that when you reach a certain degree of overcrowding, rats will start to attack, and mutilate, each other.

Like most prisons, Santa Fe was a powder keg with only one uncertainty: who would drop the match and when. More than 1,100 men were housed in quarters intended for 800; some had to sleep on mattresses on the floor.

It was inadequately guarded by insufficient numbers of young, untrained men. Fewer than 30 guards were on duty when the trouble started.

Also, the usual "safety valve" provided by joking and horseplay had been eliminated in a general crackdown that followed the escape of 11 inmates in December.

All these — the overcrowding, lack of authority, abundance of seriously mentally disturbed (psychotic or borderline) prisoners, and availability of drugs and alcohol — made New Mexico State Penitentiary ripe for riot, according to another violence expert, Dr. J. J. West, chairman of psychiatry at UCLA. As for the savagery: "A lot of murderers mutilate their victims under the discharge of very primitive feelings."

Rebels elude patrol

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — An Israeli army patrol clashed early today with a band of Palestinian guerrillas near the Israeli-Lebanese frontier before the infiltrators escaped back into Lebanon, the Tel Aviv military command said.

There was no immediate Palestinian comment on the report.

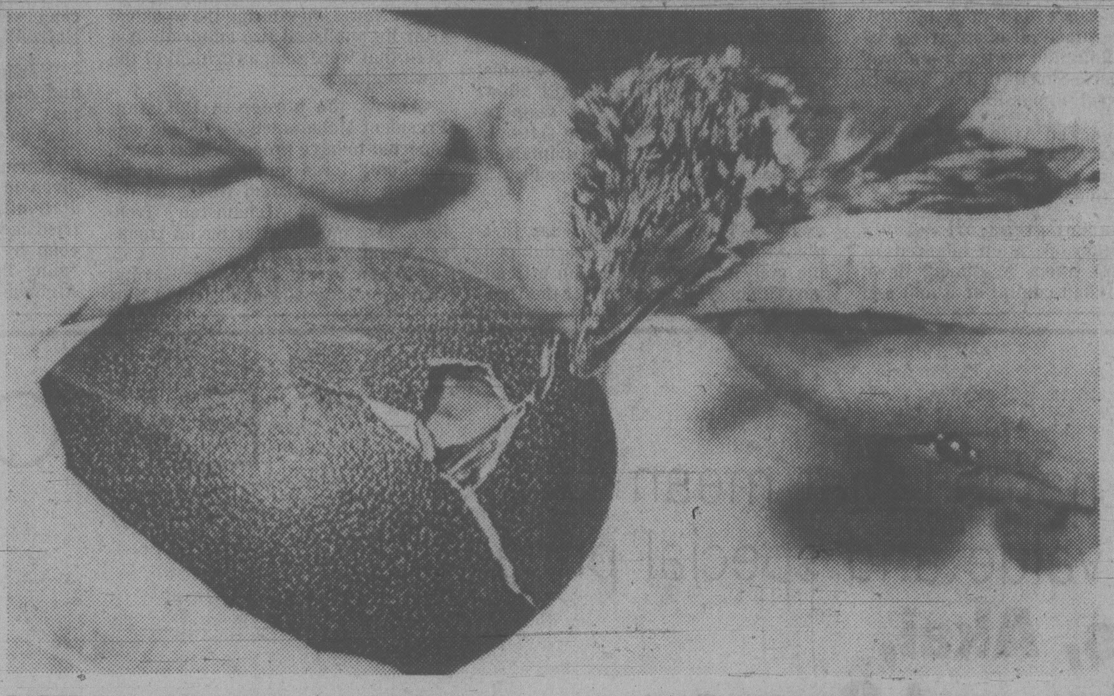
It was the first infiltration attempt reported by Israel along the Lebanese frontier since last July, when Israeli troops killed three Palestinian raiders without any Israeli casualties.

Tension has been climbing along the northern frontier in recent days as Israel and Syria accused each other of preparing for war.

In another development, rival Christian militia factions battled with machine guns and mortars in near two villages in northern Lebanon. Five men were killed and eight wounded, the government said.

Also, Israeli warplanes today swept over Beirut, already jittery because of reports that Syria plans to withdraw its peace-keeping forces from the port city.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed it had shot at the Israeli warplanes. There was no immediate elaboration on the reports from state-owned Beirut radio.



LATER EMU EMULATES recently hatched brother (sister?) — who looks on curiously — as it pecks its way into the world at Oregon State University's poultry farm in Corvallis, Ore. The ostrich-like chicks, whose native habitat is Australia, are being hatched in a university incubator because current temperatures are too cold for them at their owner's wild game farm in the southern part of the state.

Rice marchers retreat

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — A group of Western politicians and celebrities turned 20 truckloads of rice and medical supplies over to the Thai Red Cross today after their March for Survival was turned back at the Cambodian border.

March participants said they intended the Red Cross to distribute the supplies among displaced Thais and Cambodian refugees inside Thailand.

Most of the marchers — including American folk singer Joan Baez, Norwegian actress Liv Ullman, British MP Winston Churchill III, U.S. civil rights activist Bayard Rustin and New York rabbi Marc Tanenbaum — were expected to return to Bangkok later today.

The handover of supplies took place in this Thai border town, 224 kilometres east of Bangkok. The Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government in Phnom Penh earlier had condemned the march as a "very vile action" designed to interfere in Cambodia's internal affairs and had said it would not permit the Westerners into the country.

Cars-for-pot gang guilty

BIRMINGHAM (AP) — A court Wednesday convicted four young Britons who authorities had described as top figures in a syndicate that funnelled $44 million in drugs from Lebanon into Canada, the United States and Western Europe.

Court was told the syndicate traded expensive cars stolen in Western Europe for hashish and marijuana from the Middle East.

The four will be sentenced later, along with four others, all British, who previously were found guilty by another Birmingham court. No date was set for sentencing.

All were found guilty of charges including conspiracy to smuggle drugs, car theft and passport forgery. Sentences could run to more than 10 years.

Police said two members of the Amsterdam-based ring — organized by an unnamed American — are still at large and probably living on the proceeds of the group's five-year run.

Police said the gang had more than 30 members at its peak. They said gang members stole at least 280 expensive cars worth a total of $6.6 million, took them to the Middle East and exchanged them for hashish and marijuana.

A syndicate connection supplied passports, drivers licences and international documents.

The drugs were smuggled back to Amsterdam where an American, Samuel George, directed the organization from a youth hostel, the court was told.

George died in mysterious circumstances in Paris a year ago. Police are looking for his French wife and the alleged banker of the group.

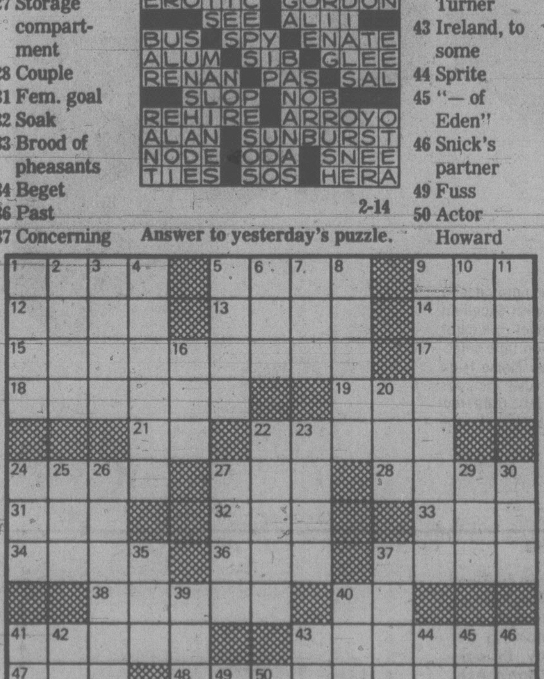
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Sindona bail ended

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A federal judge on Wednesday revoked the $3-million bail of Michele Sindona, the onetime Montreal financier accused of fraud and conspiracy in the biggest banking crash in U.S. history.

District Judge Thomas Griesa ordered Sindona jailed whenever he is not in court.

Lawyers said Griesa had forbidden them to discuss why the bail was revoked. There was speculation that Sindona's life may have been threatened or that authorities feared he might try to flee.

A small army of federal marshals descended on the courtroom just as Sindona's trial was about to begin. Rigid security measures were introduced, including electronic frisking of reporters and spectators.

A jury of six men and six women seated Tuesday was ordered sequestered for the duration of the trial, expected to last six to eight weeks.

Sindona, 59, is charged in a 69-count U.S. federal indictment with defrauding the Franklin National Bank of $45 million, causing its collapse in 1974.

He also is wanted in Italy in connection with fraud cases totalling $225 million involving banks he owned there.

Sindona, a fruit and vegetable peddler who built up a $50-million financial empire, disappeared on Aug. 2 while free in the same $3-million bond awaiting trial in the fraud case.

He reappeared Oct. 16, claiming he had been kidnapped at gunpoint and held in a New York suburb, most of the time in a windowless room. Sindona said he thought his captors were Italian leftists or radicals. He claimed they sought information on bribes he and others may have given to Italian politicians.

Neither the FBI nor the New York Police Department has accepted Sindona's account of his disappearance. They listed him simply as a missing person.

Tanker fire controlled by crewmen

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Fire that burned out the engine room of an oil-laden tanker Wednesday forcing 24 crew members to flee in lifeboats was brought under control a few hours later, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

Nine crew members stayed aboard to fight the blaze on the 180-metre tanker Aries, which radioed a mayday distress signal about 2 p.m. from west of the desolate Dry Tortugas.

"Everything is out; everything is under control," said Petty Officer Johnnie Long at the coast guard station in Miami.

The blaze that burned out of control in the engine room apparently was caused by an electrical malfunction and then spread to other parts of the ship.

Goose now loose from beer noose

WAYNE, N.J. (AP) — A four-month wild goose chase has ended for a persistent New Jersey housewife who finally freed a Canada goose from a plastic "noose" that had become entwined around its neck and head.

Joyce Shapiro, 55, had tried since October to help the goose that fed along with hundreds of others outside her lakefront home in this suburban community of 49,000.

Her vigil paid off Tuesday when she managed to trap the goose in a makeshift cage, cut off the plastic — the "collar" from a six-pack of canned beer — and release the animal unharmed.

The long-necked bird's predicament was discovered last fall by a golfer at the Packenpack golf club, near Mrs. Shapiro's home. The plastic collar seemed to frighten other geese and made it hard for the goose to eat.

Golfers and bird watchers tried in vain to capture the goose and free him, but Shapiro continued her quest. She built a gated, chicken-wire cage to try to confine the bird, and the ploy paid off.

"I was looking out the window, when I saw that the goose was actually sitting all the way in the cage eating the cracked corn." She quickly pulled the string to the cage, which ran through the window of her husband's study.

Gold falls off

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices plunged in Western Europe today, falling to $699.25 U.S. — $810 Canadian — by the afternoon fix in London after closing at $718 U.S. on Wednesday.

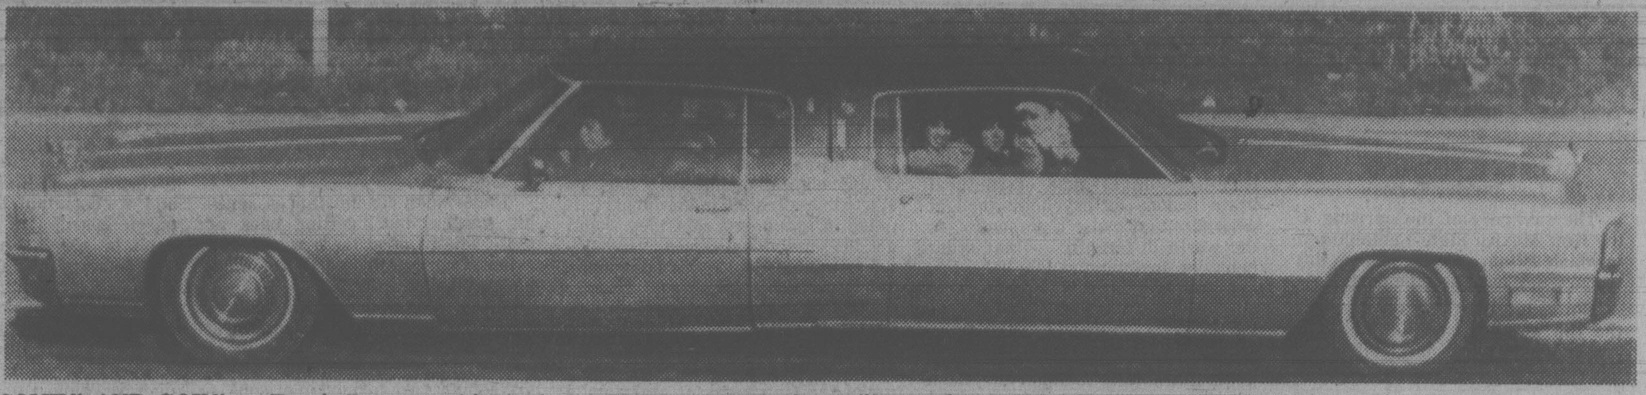
On Wednesday, the International Monetary Fund auctioned 444,000 ounces of gold in Washington at an average price of $712.12, a record auction price.

Silver sold in London this morning at $37.70 U.S. an ounce, down from $39.50 the night before.

In London, the British pound, trading at its highest levels since last July, eased slightly to $2.3075.



COMIN' AND GOIN' — Frank Pampena of Pittsburgh's got 'em. It took Pampena two years to cut apart, then weld together a 1972 Oldsmobile, left, and a 1970 Cadillac Eldorado. The "Oldsorado" sports a bar, a mirrored ceiling and a red shag carpet. It may be driven in either direction as the Eldorado had front-wheel drive, and this could help Pampena argue his way out of a ticket for driving the wrong way on a one-way street.

War materiel rumbles into Afghan heartland

Times News Services

HEIRATAN, Afghanistan — Vast quantities of Soviet equipment, including tanks and lighter armored vehicles, are still pouring through this lonely border post on Afghanistan's northern frontier with the Soviet Union.

A Manchester Guardian reporter said she watched earlier this week as a massive Soviet convoy, belching black smoke, rumbled toward the Afghan heartland. It included 150 military trucks (many carrying gasoline), 50 armored personnel carriers and five sophisticated T-62 tanks.

The convoy carried everything the Red Army apparently needs to maintain its presence here, including bridge-building materiel, tank-recovery equipment, firewood and tons of onions and potatoes to feed the 85,000 Soviet troops believed to have arrived here since the Moscow-backed coup of Dec. 27.

The convoy was headed south to the small town of Mazar-e-Sharif and the strategically vital Salang Pass which tunnels about three miles through the mighty Hindu Kush mountain range. The pass is Moscow's only highway link to the capital of Kabul and southern Afghanistan. Heavy snowfalls, rebel resistance and poor maintenance have made all other access by road, including the northern highway from Mazar-e-Sharif to the western town of Herat, impassible.

Soviet-backed Afghan forces reportedly have been using air-strikes and artillery to counter fierce rebel resistance in eastern Afghanistan.

In apparent preparation for a major military operation, hundreds of fresh Soviet troops are being flown into the Afghan capital of Kabul and Afghan units are being built up with Russian soldiers filling the ranks, The Times of London reported today in a dispatch from Kabul.

It was also reported that Afghan's Soviet-puppet government will allow an International Red Cross team to visit political prisoners in Afghan jails. The Red Cross had complained the Kabul government reneged on a promise to permit such visits.

It was further learned today that the Afghan government has dumped the man it named to edit an official government newspaper after the Dec. 27 coup. Mohammed Rahim Rafat was fired as editor of the English-language Kabul New Times during the weekend after he published two editorials last week that were seen as critical of the new regime.

Across the border in Pakistan, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq was reported to have proposed that a peacekeeping force made up of Indian, Iranian and Pakistani troops be deployed to guard Afghanistan's frontiers, presumably after Soviet troops are withdrawn.

Afghan President Babrak Karmal said in an interview published in New Delhi today that Soviet troops had entered Afghanistan 10 days before the coup which toppled his predecessor Hafizullah Amin.

Earlier versions given by the Soviet and Afghan governments indicated that Soviet troops entered Afghanistan on or after the coup date.

Karmal also said in the interview, given in Kabul to India's pro-Soviet Patriot newspaper, that Amin was tried and sentenced to death before the coup by the other members of the ruling People's Democratic party of Afghanistan.

First black man in White House to sting like bee?

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Ex-heavyweight boxing champ Muhammad Ali says he'll become the first black president of the United States in 1988.

"I am the right age and I am handsome," he told reporters here Wednesday. "I have been more popular for a long time than anybody else in the world."

For now, he said, President Carter is the "best white man" in the Democratic race.

It was at Carter's request that the three-times world heavyweight boxing champion began his controversial tour of black Africa this week to persuade nations to join a boycott of the Moscow Olympics unless the Soviet Union withdraws its troops from Afghanistan.

He ran into heavy weather in Tanzania, his first stop, where reporters grilled him for supporting the U.S. while it continues to trade with white-ruled South Africa.

In Kenya, however, Ali got a warm welcome and said at a reception in the home of U.S. ambassador Wilbert Le Melle Tuesday night that he would run for president of the United States in 1988 and win easily:

"I will get the votes and when I become president I won't lie . . . I will be truthful and I will bring justice to black people, to Puerto Ricans, to Cubans and to South Africans."

In Lagos, Nigeria, Wednesday night, Ali missed a major confrontation with demonstrating groups today when his commercial flight failed to arrive on schedule.

Shell begins oilnap suit

LONDON (AP) — Shell Oil International of London is taking legal action claiming $57.5 million against an unidentified company in South Africa in the sinking of a supertanker whose oil cargo reportedly had been replaced with seawater.

Shell would not identify who it was suing because a spokesman said the company was prevented by legal restrictions.

The action is the second taken by Shell since the tanker Salem sank off Dakar, Senegal, on Jan. 17 after a series of explosions. Shell has said it owned the Salem's cargo of 193,000 tons of light Kuwaiti crude oil.

The company issued a writ last week claiming $56.8 million against Frederick Soudan, chairman of the Liberian-registered Oxford Shipping Co. which owned the tanker. Oxford Shipping also operates out of Houston, Texas.

Soudan left London for Geneva five days ago, the day after Lloyd's and Scotland Yard began an investigation into what a Shell spokesman described as "a breathtaking case of maritime fraud."

Investigators quoted a crew member of the ship as saying the oil was secretly unloaded at Durban, where the Salem made an unscheduled stop, Dec.27.

Fifteen days later, investigators say, the vessel was scuttled off Senegal in one of the deepest trenches in the Atlantic Ocean to prevent divers from checking the hull.

Eaton's Consumer Tips

What you should know about stereos

Turntables —
There are three types of turntables; the totally manual models in which the user has to position the tone arm over the first groove, and lift it when the record is finished. The semi-automatic models that lift the arm when the side is finished. And the totally automatic, single play and mutiple play machines. The user just presses a button and the turntable plays the record, shuts off the motor, and returns the tone arm to its rest.

Headphones:
With headphones, you can listen to what you want, when you want, and as loud as you want. They have the advantage of bringing the music closer, allowing details to be heard more distinctly. In looking for good headphone performance, listen for a reasonably full bass with good tonal definition as well as smoothness from the mid range to the extreme highs.

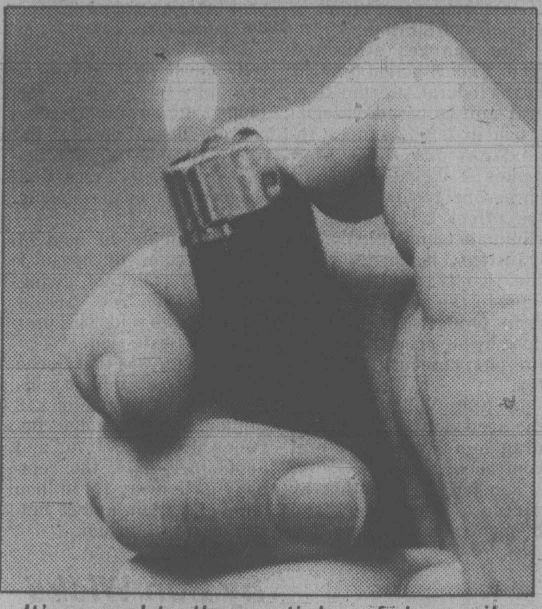
96th YEAR, No. 201 ★ ★ ★ VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1980 20 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY



It's equal to three sticks of dynamite

Lighters called time bombs

Yarrows has banned disposable lighters and the Victoria Labor Council has asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to take action to have the butane lighters — described as "time bombs" — taken off the market.

The council moved after reports that the lighters — said to have the explosive force of three sticks of dynamite — have caused serious industrial accidents, including the deaths of two railway workers in the U.S.

Three claims for lighter-related injuries were filed with the Workers' Compensation Board in B.C. last year.

Labor council secretary-treasurer Jack Groves said a letter was sent two weeks ago to the federation's health and safety committee asking it to pressure manufacturers and the government to stop the sale of such lighters.

A spokesman for Yarrows shipyard in Victoria says in addition to the ban, workers have been alerted to the danger of carrying them.

In Kitimat, Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. has also banned the lighters on its premises following an accident in which a worker carrying a lighter was splashed with molten aluminum.

A drop of the hot metal landed on the plastic lighter, burned through, and caused an explosion which added to the worker's burns.

Fire department spokesman said there have been cases reported across Canada of young people throwing the lighters against walls in experiments to make them explode.

In Ottawa today the consumer affairs department said it passed regulations last year providing safety performance standards that would eliminate problems with malfunctioning lighters — disposable or not.

The department said it has no plans to ban the sale of the lighters and believes the regulations which will become effective in November will improve the situation.

The department has studied the problem, said a spokesman, and has learned that a damaged valve can prevent the lighter from self-extinguishing.

Heat can build which in turn can damage the lighter case, possibly causing it to explode.

The department recommends that the lighters not be taken into places involving welding or work with hot metals.

Groves said any industry that has open flames or sparks could could create potentially dangerous conditions.

The safety of disposable lighters has recently come under scrutiny by safety agencies in North America.

Allan Scott of Bic, whose company distributes some 30 million disposable lighters annually in Canada, said simulated welding accidents were part of the company's testing.

Last year Bic commissioned private laboratory tests on its lighters. They were placed on a 600-watt electric element and the power turned on. The fastest explosion was 1 minute, 46 seconds.

Scott said that over the past four years Bic has settled several consumer claims, but none for lighters that actually exploded.

An industry spokesman said the big three in disposable lighters — Bic, Gillette and Ronson — all meet the stringent federal standards that went into operation last year.

But there is some concern about foreign-made inferior imports that have been dumped on the Canadian market.

Solution near for hostages

Rogers orders steelhead ban

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers today slapped a ban on the taking of all wild steelhead in Vancouver Island streams.

Effective immediately and until March 31, any that are caught must be returned unharmed to the stream.

The move is being made to conserve critically low numbers of early-returning steelhead, Rogers said.

Counts of wild steelhead and catch surveys reveal that the number of potential spawners is far less than required for proper seeding of spawning and rearing areas, he said.

The regulation does not apply to hatchery steelhead which are identified by a missing adipose fin and healed scar.

Hatchery steelhead are present in the Big Qualicum, Campbell and Quinsam Rivers and to a lesser extent in the Little Qualicum, Stamp and Salmon Rivers.

Rogers said the population of wild steelhead was reduced because of severe floods in the fall and winter of 1975-76 which led to poor fingerling and fry survival and subsequent low adult population this winter.

Washington State is also experiencing poor returns of wild steelhead to most of their rivers and the same causes are suspected

The United States and Iran are nearing a "face-saving" agreement that would lead to freeing the 50 American hostages held for 96 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, a Kuwaiti newspaper said today.

"The first step toward a settlement will be the establishment of an international commssion to look into the crimes of the ousted shah," the newspaper Al Anba said. "Once the commission finishes its report, the hostages will be handed over to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and the United States will lift its sanctions against Iran."

In Washington, the state department said today it has shelved plans to impose formal economic sanctions on Iran in hopes of speeding a diplomatic solution to the hostage situation.

"The (U.S.) administration is holding the sanctions regulations in abeyance while diplomatic activities continue," department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

"We don't want to take the formal steps toward the sanctions if the crisis can be solved by these means."

The decision, he added, is "aimed, we hope, at enhancing our diplomatic activities."

Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher described the situation surrounding the hostages as "somewhat promising." He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, Iran's Foreign Ministry, contacted by telephone from London, confirmed that Information Minister Nasser Minachi, jailed Wednesday, was freed from custody early today.

Minachi's release followed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's open confrontation with Moslem militants whose charges against Minachi led to his arrest. The president accused the militants for acting like "children who don't know what they are doing."

The ruling Revolutionary Council, stung by the unauthorized arrest of Minachi by revolutionary guards following an inflamatory broadcast by the Moslem militants, has ordered Iran's state-owned radio and television network not to allow the militants any further air time to broadcast allegations stemming from documents purportedly found in the U.S. embassy.

Meanwhile, Panama's foreign minister says the shah cannot leave Panama and that he is living in the country "as if it were a jail," but the Panamanian president said the exiled monarch is free to leave under certain conditions.

The statements by Foreign Minister Carlos Ozores and President Aristedes Royo in separate television interviews Wednesday were the latest in a series of confusing statements issued by Panamanian authorities on the status of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

CREAM-PIE CAPER zeroed in on noted physicist Dr. Edward Teller during lecture engagement at UCLA in Los Angeles Wednesday night. Attacker was unidentified, and police hustled him away before his motive could be determined. Dr. Teller, who helped develop the atomic bomb, was speaking on nuclear energy.

Only $3 barrel oil hike: Pierre

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau says he'll keep the wellhead oil price increase under $3 a barrel this year if elected prime minister in the Feb. 18 election.

Trudeau's comment, in a CFTO-TV interview taped for broadcast Wednesday night, is the closest the former prime minister has come to being specific about oil prices since he first proposed a made-in-Canada price system at the start of the campaign.

Pressed for details, Trudeau proposed later in the campaign a price-blend formula based on the different oil source levels in consultation with the provinces.

Prime Minister Clark had negotiated a total $4-a-barrel increase for 1980 before his Conservative government was toppled Dec. 13.

The price increase that would be negotiated by the Liberals would "mean that either the people of Alberta or the multinationals or somebody will be getting less windfall profits," Trudeau said in the television interview.

There is no reason why Canadians should buy their own oil at prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Trudeau added.

Canadian oil has reached $14.75 a barrel .

Denticare getting brush-off?

The government promise to have a provincial denticare program in place by this spring is fading.

"It's obviously the opinion of the government that this particular year is not the year we can afford to start an ongoing, very expensive program," Health Minister Rafe Mair said.

Mair's comment follows a statement by Premier Bill Bennett earlier this week that "our goals are not always attainable as quickly as we want."

Mair indicated the denticare plan is now complete.

"As a health minister my job is to get a program ready to go, and that's done."

But whether that program is put into effect is up to the ministry of finance and the treasury board, he said.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has refused to comment on why the government would delay denticare when he reported this week a third-quarter interim budgetary surplus of $303.9 million.

He told reporters to wait for his new budget March 10.

Tremor hits Okanagan

An earthquake measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale struck the south Okanagan Wednesday night, a spokesman for the Pacific Geoscience Centre in Victoria said today.

The tremor shook the area for about 30 seconds. No injuries were reported and damage was minimal.

London rife with buggings

LONDON (AP) — British secret services bugged the telephones of foreign embassies in London "including the Americans," a British weekly news magazine reported today.

The alleged embassy bugging is the latest disclosure linked to a government eavesdropping operation code-named Tinkerbell.

The liberal weekly New Statesman first blew the whistle on the operation last week, in an article written by 27-year-old telecommunications expert Duncan Campbell.

"The major targets of the British bug teams appear to be political," Campbell wrote in the second installment today.

Campbell quoted an unidentified former British intelligence official who worked at one of the London phone-tapping centres as describing the targets as:

"Embassies, all of them . . including the Americans. . . . Trade union leaders and offices, all the time; journalists, not very many, we've got enough information from inside. . . . Shipping companies, they're a very valuable source of information; a few MPs . . . ."

Campbell did not say if the embassy bugging is still going on.

However, he claimed U.S. intelligence agents bugged "critical meetings" during last year's conference of non-aligned countries in Havana, Cuba, and passed the information to Britain through a link with the U.S. National Security Agency.

"On her visit to Washington (last month), (Prime Minister Margaret) Thatcher made a particular point of thanking President Carter for this technical assistance," Campbell said.

The government has acknowledged it eavesdropped for national security reasons but has not given any details. It also has denied that the phones of members of Parliament were tapped.

The latest article backed up a report in The Sunday Times that British security services conducted a "massive intelligence attack" last autumn on Patriotic Front guerrilla delegates to the Rhodesian peace talks in London.

No draft dodger haven, says Flora

REGINA (UPC) — Canada will not become "a haven for draft dodgers" from the United States again, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said here Wednesday.

She was replying on a radio talk show to the question of what Canada would do if the United States begins drafting men — and perhaps women — because of the increasingly hot Cold War.

An estimated 50,000 to 100,000 young American men, fleeing military service, came to Canada during the late 1960s and early 1970s while the United States waged the Vietnam war.

Although many returned to the United States when President Jimmy Carter declared an amnesty for draft dodgers early in his term, thousands stayed and became Canadian citizens.

But Miss MacDonald said:"I don't see Canada harboring draft dodgers. I just don't see at this point that we would suddenly turn ourselves into a haven for draft dodgers."

Canada, although a member of U.S.-led military alliances such as NATO and Norad, maintained a largely neutral policy during the Vietnam war under successive Liberal administrations. Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau was prime minister from 1968 through the end of the war.

But since the election of Prime Minister Joe Clark's Progressive Conservatives last year, the government has responded to the Iran and Afghanistan crises by taking an increasingly hawkish stand towards the Soviet Union.

Miss MacDonald said the government had not developed firm plans for closing the border to U.S. draft evaders.

"I don't know what steps could be taken, I just haven't given any detailed thought to it," she said. 'But I don't see us encouraging people to avoid their responsibilities to their own country."

The Canadian government followed the American lead in limiting trade with the Soviet Union and supporting Carter's call for an Olympic boycott in the wake of the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

Miss MacDonald said Wednesday that Canada would be prepared to play a further role in the Middle East if a major conflict develops there.

"If there is any kind of a call on Canada, we'll be there," she said. "I don't mean we will go out and engage in military action, but in other ways."

The economic development commission established three years ago to entice industry to Victoria is dormant, but perhaps the Capital Regional District or the Chamber of Commerce might drop a line to the Intel Corp. of Santa Clara, Calif.

The computer chip manufacturer (sales last year $650 million) is looking for space to expand. In a story Jan. 28 about "Silicon Valley" south of San Francisco where the electronics industry is concentrated, The Vancouver Sun sketched Intel's shopping list:

"A large city with a reputation as a good place to live, an airport, schools and universities and a chunk of serviced land, for which the company is prepared to pay top rates.

"The promise: A non-polluting industry bringing in 5,000 to 10,000 jobs over a five-year period and a policy of on-the-job training that will mean most of the jobs will be filled locally."

Intel is restless because the Silicon Valley is getting crowded. Santa Clara has only space for another 1,300 building lots.

How about sending the company one of those glossy brochures which tell how eager Victoria is for newcomers and prospective investors?

All inquiries, please, to Intel Corp., 3065 Bowers, Sanata Clara, Calif. Or if the chamber or the CRD can spare $4, telephone direct 112-408-987-8080. That'll get you three minutes of chairman of the board Gordon Moore's time.

Tell him the press sent you. Who says we're never constructive?

Great hulking railway cars on a downtown city street, competing with automobiles? Crazy.

But examined a little more carefully, the proposal makes sense. It is quite workable. Trains now come across the Johnson Street bridge and up Store. They don't seem to scare the horses.

From the bridge to Cooper's proposed terminal on the north side of Pandora would be a similar trip, just 1,600 feet. Only 90 seconds at 12 miles an hour.

This phobia about mixing traffic and tracks is relatively modern, for two and three-car trains of streetcars have travelled city streets in harmony for decades prior to the misguided rails-to-rubber switchover in the 1950s.

Look on the Dayliner as just another big bus or a semi-trailer.

To make it safe, Cooper has borrowed the traffic separation system used on the First Narrows bridge in Vancouver. It has three lanes, one northbound, another for southbound traffic and a middle lane reversible for the rush hours.

Overhead lights every couple of hundred yards tell drivers which lane is open in their direction. Fairly simple and foolproof.

The description on paper makes it sound like a mad scheme, but it's worked well for more than a decade.

Steel tracks laid down on Pandora from Blanshard to the the bridge might make bicycling in the rain tricky, but that's the only disadvantage I can see.

On the other hand, the advantages are numerous. The Dayliner would become a real inter-city rail service. Its present terminus over in Victoria West is in the middle of nowhere and connects with no other method of transport except 'shank's mare.

Patrons have starved waiting for cabs and until recently there wasn't even a pay phone in the spartan little station.

A downtown terminal would give people an incentive to use the E & N as a commuter carrier, which already has stops in Vic West, Esquimalt, View Royal, Langford and points north.

The city hall location for a transport terminal makes planning sense as well. The business district of Victoria has been slowly edging northwards ever since the Centennial Square project nearly 20 years ago began to rejuvenate the neighborhood.

The province last year completed a major office block on Blanshard, there's Market Square down Pandora and two blocks west, Chinatown is undergoing a $1 million spruce-up. A major new hotel is planned for Herald and Douglas.

The terminal could be the centrepiece of a revived city hall precinct, which hasn't been the real heart of downtown since they demolished the old city market and stopped running interurbans out to Saanich from Douglas and Pandora.

Does anybody out there want to make tracks?

By PAUL MINVIELLE

It's probably an exaggeration to call Alan Parkin a railroad tycoon but as of right now, at this very moment, he owns the entire rolling stock of a railway.

To be specific, Parkin has four locomotives — two electric and two gas-powered — 15 steel ore cars, 14 flat and boxcars and some spare parts.

Of course, it's not exactly CN-sized stuff.

It's scaled-down equipment that was used by Canadian Industries Ltd. to move men and material around James Island, near Sidney.

There were also steam-driven engines and compressors and a variety of mechanical equipment.

As he demonstrated a hand-powered, side dumping ore car, Parkin commented: "Virtually none of this stuff is in existence anywhere anymore."

He had planned to set the rail system up on his own property, but it's zoned for agriculture and he doesn't have the time or the resources to wait for 1½ years or longer to get it rezoned.

He said several people have flown into Victoria to take pictures of the railroad, but so far no one has come up with his asking price.

"They've got to go home and see if they can get local approval too," Parkin said.

The price doesn't include any track although Parkin hopes to get some that's still on the island.

While CIL's James Island plant is closed, the company will apparently be using it for storage for the next five years or so.

Parkin regrets the railroad wasn't left in place.

He said there are at least eight miles of track, maybe even 12, which serviced all parts of the island.

Parkin thinks it would have added a special dimension to a resort on the property.

So if you've got the room, some sympathetic municipal politicians who happen to be train buffs, and a source of narrow gauge railway track, give Parkin a call at 382-4214.

Oops. Almost forgot.

You'll need $45,000 too.

Ferry bus fare up by 14%

Pacific Coach Lines has increased bus fares on the Victoria-Vancouver ferry run by as much as 14 per cent.

The one-way fare during peak travel times increased to $7.25 from $6.60, effective Feb. 1, while the one-way fare for off-peak periods went up 75 cents to $6.25.

Pacific Coach Lines was created in April, 1979, with the merger of Pacific Stage Lines and Vancouver Island Coach Lines into a single Crown company.

The company reports to Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm but requires no authority to increase its fares other than that of its board of directors.

Jack Thomas, general manager of the Victoria-Vancouver Island operation, said Wednesday Vander Zalm was aware of the increase, but he did not know whether the minister had reported it to cabinet.

Thomas said the fare increase was the first since 1960.

The company gave no public notice of the increase. New fares were posted in bus depots here and in Vancouver.

Thomas said the corporation is not legally required to publish fare increases.

Budget-tied fees coming for UVic

By AB KENT

A new policy on student tuition fees — which could see them rise along with university budgets — will be developed by the University of Victoria's board of governors within four months.

Board chairman Joe Cunliffe said Wednesday the finance committee must decide between now and June on a system that would allow tuition fees to respond to the pressures that force university spending higher.

"In the next six weeks we'll be tieing something down," Cunliffe said.

Cunliffe, however, said students should pay more than a token fee for their education.

If it costs $5,000 a year to educate a student, is it right to ask only $400 in tuition fees?.

Student fees as a percentage cost of education have dropped steadily over the years, the chairman pointed out.

The finance committee reported to a recent board meeting on the lock-fee system which going into effect at the University of B.C. this year.

The move apparently meets with approval of the Universities Council of B.C., which apportions public financing between the universities.

Following a council suggestion that universities examine the UBC policy, UVic has opened its tuition fees to scrutiny.

Students have responded by asking the board to at least give 60 days notice of any fee increase.

They have also condemned the UBC move as the first attempt in Canada to set tuition as a fixed revenue source.

"We expect that there will also be serious attempts here to follow suit. Students cannot accept any proposal of this nature," said UVic Alma Mater Society external vice-president Terry Johnson.

A 10 per cent fee hike goes into effect at UBC this spring, and thereafter tuition fees must produce a minimum of 10 per cent of the university's operating costs.

Fees at present produce about 8.5 per cent of UBC operating revenue.

"It sets a dangerous precedent," said Johnson.

Light branch to move

A proposal to move the city's street light employees to the Garbally Road works yard and to lease out present quarters in the old city light building at 450 Swift was approved today by the public works committee.

Assistant municipal manager Colin Crisp told the committee the city engineering department wants to renovate the 90-year-old blacksmith shop at the works yard to house the street lighting division at a cost of $170,000.

That would leave the old city light building on the Inner Harbor vacant and Crisp proposed to lease it for warehouse space until Chinatown redevelopment plans are firm.

The eventual plan is to sell the building (a potential price of $180,000 was mentioned) but that hinges on relocating the adjacent garbage wharf.

And that depends on the Capital Regional District making up its mind on future plans for region-wide garbage disposal.

Shorter outfall okayed against expert advice

Federal experts have warned it won't work but Capital Regional District directors decided Wednesday to recommend the regional board go ahead with a shorter 3,500-foot $4 million outfall at Clover Point.

The solid waste management and sewage committee also recommended a contract be drawn up between the district and consulting engineers CH2M Hill for up to $280,000. This amount will cover costs of design and supervision of construction.

The Pollution Control Branch has granted a permit to build the outfall with the proviso that the district confirm in writing that it is physically and technically feasible to extend the outfall to the originally-planned 6,000 feet if monitoring proves necessary.

The permit was granted in spite of warnings by Environment Canada experts that the outfall length should not be shortened.

F.G. Claggett, manager of Enviroment Canada's technical services group, stated in a report:

"Environment Canada recommends that the Clover Point outfall length required by the (original) permit be maintained.

"The temptation to ignore field data and approve a shorter outfall based mostly on cost considerations should be avoided since it will be difficult to prevent the same approach being taken by other municipalities.

"It should be recognized that once the outfall has been installed it will be difficult, if not impossible, to effect an extension. The alternative of imposing sewage treatment with the shorter outfall will be more costly in terms of capital and operating expenses and may not achieve its purpose."

PCB engineer J.W.A. Donald noted the CH2M Hill study does not prove discharge at the proposed location will not cause shoreline pollution but he felt the permit could be granted on a trial basis.

"To require the expenditure of several millions of dollars which might not be absolutely necessary cannot be condoned," he reasoned.

CH2M Hill engineer Steven Lackey said the project could be ready for tender in June, the contract could be awarded in July and the outfall completed by October.

The permit calls for work to be completed by Dec. 31.

At present sewage is being discharged about 200 feet from the tip of Clover Point through a pipe that broke at a weld during construction. The regional district, engineering consultants and the contractor of the uncompleted outfall have been suing each other for two years.

An announcement of a settlement is expected soon.

Lackey noted the regional district has already bought the polyethelene pipe that originally was to be used but he is investigating costs and stability of other types of pipe.

On another outfall front, directors were told that tests on the Macaulay Point outfall show it is still meeting PCB standards — even with 20 feet of pipe broken off the end.

Regional engineer Norman Howard told the committee an underwater camera was used for the inspection and a videotape, covering the whole length of the 6,100-foot pipe, is available.

A strong green dye was inserted into the pumping station well and then pumped through the outfall. At the same time a check was made from a helicopter and a boat.

"After an hour of pumping a small subsurface green cloud was noticed over the end of the pipe. The green dye cloud was quickly dissipated before it broke through the water surface, and no sign of the dye was visible from the boat," Howard reported.

In other business, the committee agreed to recommend to the regional board that $21,970 be paid to the University of Victoria. The money represents 12 monthy payments of $1,831 for the services of Dr. Derek Ellis as co-ordinator of the monitoring program in the McMicking Point outfall area from March 1980 to March 1981.

Engineer strikes out on energy-saving plan

Regional engineer Norman Howard failed Wednesday in an attempt to launch a wide-ranging energy-saving program in the unorganized areas of the Capital Regional District.

He wanted a program aimed at enforcing such requirements as double-glazed windows, more efficient heating systems and improved building lighting.

Bob Wright, chairman of the solid waste management and sewage disposal committee, said he was dead against Howard's recommendation that the regional building code, which would affect all people in the electoral areas, be amended to require such moves.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said a court case had ruled that municipalities or regional districts do not have the power to demand tighter regulations than the National Building Code.

Howard had wanted an additional $4,500 for "staff time and advice from electrical consultants." This was turned down.

The directors also rejected Howard's suggestion that a citizens' Energy Use Advisory Committee be formed.

The directors did agree with Howard that a program aimed at saving energy in all regional buildings, recreational complexes, sewer and water pumping stations, regional vehicles and treatment plants should be initiated.

They also endorsed Howard's suggestion that staff investigate the availability of federal and provincial funds to help defray the costs of this program.

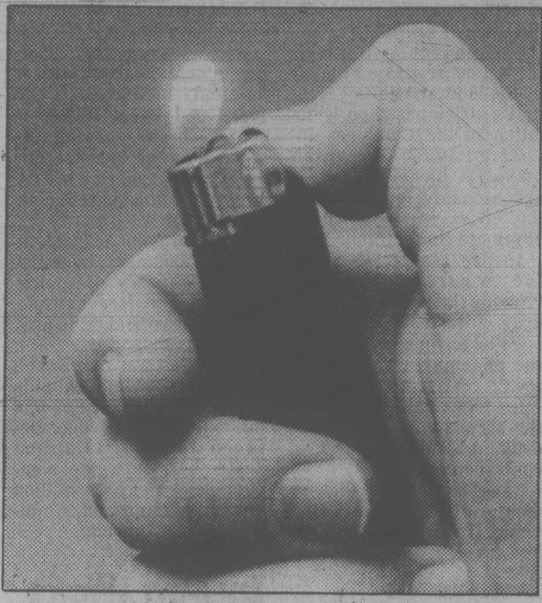
96th YEAR, No. 201 ★ VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1980 20 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY



It's equal to three sticks of dynamite

Lighters called time bombs

Yarrows has banned disposable lighters and the Victoria Labor Council has asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to take action to have the butane lighters — described as "time bombs" — taken off the market.

The council moved after reports that the lighters — said to have the explosive force of three sticks of dynamite — have caused serious industrial accidents.

Three claims for lighter-related injuries were filed with the Workers' Compensation Board in B.C. last year.

Labor council secretary-treasurer Jack Groves said a letter was sent two weeks ago to the federation's health and safety committee asking it to pressure manufacturers and the government to stop the sale of such lighters.

A spokesman for Yarrows shipyard in Victoria says in addition to the ban workers have been alerted to the danger of carrying them.

In Kitimat, Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. has also banned the lighters on its premises following an accident in which a worker carrying a lighter was splashed with molten aluminum.

A drop of the hot metal landed on the plastic lighter, burned through, and caused an explosion which added to the worker's burns.

Fire department spokesman said there have been cases reported across Canada of young people throwing the lighters against walls in experiments to make them explode.

In Ottawa today the consumer affairs department said it passed regulations last year providing safety performance standards that would eliminate problems with malfunctioning lighters — disposable or not.

The department said it has no plans to ban the sale of the lighters and believes the regulations which will become effective in November will improve the situation.

The department has studied the problem, said a spokesman, and has learned that a damaged valve can prevent the lighter from self-extinguishing.

Heat can build which in turn can damage the lighter case, possibly causing it to explode.

The department recommends that the lighters not be taken into places involving welding or work with hot metals.

Groves said any industry that has open flames or sparks could create potentially dangerous conditions.

The safety of disposable lighters has recently come under scrutiny by safety agencies in North America.

Allan Scott of Bic, whose company distributes some 30 million disposable lighters annually in Canada, said simulated welding accidents were part of the company's testing.

Last year Bic commissioned private laboratory tests on its lighters. They were placed on a 600-watt electric element and the power turned on. The fastest explosion was 1 minute, 46 seconds.

Scott said that over the past four years Bic has settled several consumer claims, but none for lighters that actually exploded.

An industry spokesman said the big three in disposable lighters — Bic, Gillette and Ronson — all meet the stringent federal standards that went into operation last year.

But there is some concern about foreign-made inferior imports that have been dumped on the Canadian market.

Solution near for hostages

Times News Services

The United States and Iran are nearing a "face-saving" agreement that would lead to freeing the 50 American hostages held for 96 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, a Kuwaiti newspaper said today.

"The first step toward a settlement will be the establishment of an international commission to look into the crimes of the ousted shah," the newspaper Al Anba said. "Once the commission finishes its report, the hostages will be handed over to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and the United States will lift its sanctions against Iran."

In Washington, the state department said today it has shelved plans to impose formal economic sanctions on Iran in hopes of speeding a diplomatic solution to the hostage situation.

"The (U.S.) administration is holding the sanctions regulations in abeyance while diplomatic activities continue," department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

"We don't want to take the formal steps toward the sanctions if the crisis can be solved by these means."

The decision, he added, is "aimed, we hope, at enhancing our diplomatic activities."

Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher described the situation surrounding the hostages as "somewhat promising." He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, Iran's Foreign Ministry, contacted by telephone from London, confirmed that Information Minister Nasser Minachi, jailed Wednesday, was freed from custody early today.

Minachi's release followed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's open confrontation with Moslem militants whose charges against Minachi led to his arrest. The president accused the militants for acting like "children who don't know what they are doing."

The ruling Revolutionary Council, stung by the unauthorized arrest of Minachi by revolutionary guards following an inflamatory broadcast by the Moslem militants, has ordered Iran's state-owned radio and television network not to allow the militants any further air time to broadcast allegations stemming from documents purportedly found in the U.S. embassy.

Meanwhile, Panama's foreign minister says the shah cannot leave Panama and that he is living in the country "as if it were a jail," but the Panamanian president said the exiled monarch is free to leave under certain conditions.

The statements by Foreign Minister Carlos Ozores and President Aristedes Royo in separate television interviews Wednesday were the latest in a series of confusing statements issued by Panamanian authorities on the status of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Rogers orders steelhead ban

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers today slapped a ban on the taking of all wild steelhead in Vancouver Island streams.

Effective immediately and until March 31, any that are caught must be returned unharmed to the stream.

The move is being made to conserve critically low numbers of early-returning steelhead, Rogers said.

Counts of wild steelhead and catch surveys reveal that the number of potential spawners is far less than required for proper seeding of spawning and rearing areas, he said.

The regulation does not apply to hatchery steelhead which are identified by a missing adipose fin and healed scar.

Hatchery steelhead are present in the Big Qualicum, Campbell and Quinsam Rivers and to a lesser extent in the Little Qualicum, Stamp and Salmon Rivers.

Rogers said the population of wild steelhead was reduced because of severe floods in the fall and winter of 1975-76 which led to poor fingerling and fry survival and subsequent low adult population this winter.

Washington State is also experiencing poor returns of wild steelhead to most of their rivers and the same causes are suspected

CREAM-PIE CAPER zeroed in on noted physicist Dr. Edward Teller during lecture engagement at UCLA in Los Angeles Wednesday night. Attacker was unidentified, and police hustled him away before his motive could be determined. Dr. Teller, who helped develop the atomic bomb, was speaking on nuclear energy.

Only $3 barrel oil hike: Pierre

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau says he'll keep the wellhead oil price increase under $3 a barrel this year if elected prime minister in the Feb. 18 election.

Trudeau's comment, in a CFTO-TV interview taped for broadcast Wednesday night, is the closest the former prime minister has come to being specific about oil prices since he first proposed a made-in-Canada price system at the start of the campaign.

Pressed for details, Trudeau proposed later in the campaign a price-blend formula based on the different oil source levels in consultation with the provinces.

Prime Minister Clark had negotiated a total $4-a-barrel increase for 1980 before his Conservative government was toppled Dec. 13.

The price increase that would be negotiated by the Liberals would "mean that either the people of Alberta or the multinationals or somebody will be getting less windfall profits," Trudeau said in the television interview.

There is no reason why Canadians should buy their own oil at prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Trudeau added.

Canadian oil has reached $14.75 a barrel.

Denticare getting brush-off?

The government promise to have a provincial denticare program in place by this spring is fading.

"It's obviously the opinion of the government that this particular year is not the year we can afford to start an ongoing, very expensive program," Health Minister Rafe Mair said.

Mair's comment follows a statement by Premier Bill Bennett earlier this week that "our goals are not always attainable as quickly as we want."

Mair indicated the denticare plan is now complete.

"As a health minister my job is to get a program ready to go, and that's done."

But whether that program is put into effect is up to the ministry of finance and the treasury board, he said.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has refused to comment on why the government would delay denticare when he reported this week a third-quarter interim budgetary surplus of $303.9 million.

He told reporters to wait for his new budget March 10.

Tremor hits Okanagan

An earthquake measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale struck the south Okanagan Wednesday night, a spokesman for the Pacific Geoscience Centre in Victoria said today.

The tremor shook the area for about 30 seconds. No injuries were reported and damage was minimal.

London rife with buggings

LONDON (AP) — British secret services bugged the telephones of foreign embassies in London "including the Americans," a British weekly news magazine reported today.

The alleged embassy bugging is the latest disclosure linked to a government eavesdropping operation code-named Tinkerbell.

The liberal weekly New Statesman first blew the whistle on the operation last week, in an article written by 27-year-old telecommunications expert Duncan Campbell.

"The major targets of the British bug teams appear to be political," Campbell wrote in the second installment today.

Campbell quoted an unidentified former British intelligence official who worked at one of the London phone-tapping centres as describing the targets as:

"Embassies, all of them . . . including the Americans. . . . Trade union leaders and offices, all the time; journalists, not very many, we've got enough information from inside. . . . Shipping companies, they're a very valuable source of information; a few MPs. . . ."

Campbell did not say if the embassy bugging is still going on.

However, he claimed U.S. intelligence agents bugged "critical meetings" during last year's conference of non-aligned countries in Havana, Cuba, and passed the information to Britain through a link with the U.S. National Security Agency.

"On her visit to Washington (last month), (Prime Minister Margaret) Thatcher made a particular point of thanking President Carter for this technical assistance," Campbell said.

The government has acknowledged it eavesdropped for national security reasons but has not given any details. It also has denied that the phones of members of Parliament were tapped.

The latest article backed up a report in The Sunday Times that British security services conducted a "massive intelligence attack" last autumn on Patriotic Front guerrilla delegates to the Rhodesian peace talks in London.

No draft dodger haven, says Flora

REGINA (UPC) — Canada will not become "a haven for draft dodgers" from the United States again, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said here Wednesday.

She was replying on a radio talk show to the question of what Canada would do if the United States begins drafting men — and perhaps women — because of the increasingly hot Cold War.

An estimated 50,000 to 100,000 young American men, fleeing military service, came to Canada during the late 1960s and early 1970s while the United States waged the Vietnam war.

Although many returned to the United States when President Jimmy Carter declared an amnesty for draft dodgers early in his term, thousands stayed and became Canadian citizens.

But Miss MacDonald said: "I don't see Canada harboring draft dodgers. I just don't see at this point that we would suddenly turn ourselves into a haven for draft dodgers."

Canada, although a member of U.S.-led military alliances such as NATO and Norad, maintained a largely neutral policy during the Vietnam war under successive Liberal administrations. Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau was prime minister from 1968 through the end of the war.

But since the election of Prime Minister Joe Clark's Progressive Conservatives last year, the government has responded to the Iran and Afghanistan crises by taking an increasingly hawkish stand towards the Soviet Union.

Miss MacDonald said the government had not developed firm plans for closing the border to U.S. draft evaders.

"I don't know what steps could be taken, I just haven't given any detailed thought to it," she said. "But I don't see us encouraging people to avoid their responsibilities to their own country."

The Canadian government followed the American lead in limiting trade with the Soviet Union and supporting Carter's call for an Olympic boycott in the wake of the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

Miss MacDonald said Wednesday that Canada would be prepared to play a further role in the Middle East if a major conflict develops there.

"If there is any kind of a call on Canada, we'll be there," she said. "I don't mean we will go out and engage in military action, but in other ways."

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply higher at the close of active trading Thursday.

Interest in oil and gas stocks were responsible for the advance analysts said.

Volume was 9.03 million compared with 8.54 million Wednesday.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 209 advanced, 185 declined and 162 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led tradining in the industrials, dropping .05 to $7.80 on 65,050 shares and Proflex Ltd. remained steady at .27 on 7,000. Taro Industries remained unchanged at $4.10 on 5,500 and Grouse Mountain remained unchanged at .80 on 5,100. Northway Gestalt dropped .05 to $2.25 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. remained steady at $1.60.

On the resource and development board, Ni-Cal Development rose ¼ at $16¼ on 108,625 shares and Barrier Reef Resources gained .10 to $1.10 on 101,900. Silver Standard advanced .22 to $2.10 on 91,780 and Colby Mines Ltd. rose .05 to $3.25 on 89,100. Canalta Resources gained .04 to $1.09 and Rio Plata Silver Mines dropped .13 to $2.12.

Quinto Mining Corp. led trading on the curb exchange, remaining steady at $1.70 on 424,900 shares and Nomad Mines Ltd. rose $1.20 to $3.60 on 259,500. Poseidon Explorations rose .10 to .90 on 226,000 and Great World Resources gained .11 to $1.65 on 89,100. Burlington Gold advanced .03 to .88 and Interlake Development Corp. rose .04 to .74.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a strong advance in heavy trading Thursday, carrying the market's early-1980 rally to new highs.

A Kuwaiti newspaper reported that the American hostages in Tehran might soon be released. But one U.S. official said he had no confirmation of such a development.

Some analysts contend that investors recently have been paying more attention to the domestic economic outlook than to the Middle East situation anyway.

Persistent strength in the market has been attributed to a move of institutional funds out of bonds and into stocks because of the prospect of continuing rapid inflation.

Oil and rail issues, which spearheaded the market's advance on Wednesday, showed more strength Thursday.

The five most active NYSE issues were all oils — Gulf, up 2½ to $43⅝; Occidental Petroleum, up ½ to $30⅛; Texaco, up 1⅜ to $38⅞; Exxon, up 1¾ to $64½, and Standard Oil of California, up 3⅝ to $72⅛.

Among the rails, Chessie System was up 2⅜ to $32⅞ and Santa Fe Industries added 1¼ to $65¾.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market firmed near the close of quite trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index jumped 8.4 to 464.3.

Golds declined while industrials advanced.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 cup mushrooms, drained
1 cup frozen green beans, partially cooked
1 cup sliced Chinese cabbage
½ cup bean sprouts, blanched (or canned, drained)
½ cup canned bamboo shoots, drained
4 water chestnuts, sliced
3 green onions, sliced
1 tablespoon sherry

Combine cornstarch, salt and egg white. Toss pork in mixture to coat. Heat oil. Add pork and stir until it begins to brown and is cooked through. Remove. Add garlic and brown. Add soy sauce. Stir in mushrooms, green beans, bean sprouts, bamboo shoots and water chestnuts and cook 2 minutes. Add Chinese cabbage, cover, cook one minute longer.

CUCUMBER SALAD

2 medium cucumbers
1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 tablespoons vinegar
Freshly-ground black pepper to taste
1 tablespoon salad oil
Add a few drops of sesame oil to taste, if available

Tailoring lifts size 52 morale

CALGARY (CP) — No dress in the world can hide the fact that a woman is a size 52, says Louise Allan, a Calgary dressmaker who designs fashions for fatties.

But, she adds, if that dress is well tailored and of top quality fabric it will still do wonders for the weighty woman's morale.

Allan, who moved to Calgary from Quebec 13 years ago, says she was struck by the number of overweight women she saw in Alberta.

"I could see there was a huge market here," she says with a chuckle.

She maintains that clothing manufacturers don't design stylish ensembles for the larger set. Her customers complain that there are few available alternatives to the polyester pantsuit that bags and sags after only a few washings.

Allan says that even though there's no way to disguise a weight problem, there are plenty of tricks of the design trade that can minimize the effect.

The dressmaker says any custom-made garment is going to be more expensive than one off the rack.

And her customers must pay even more because "the cost of the fabric alone is often double."

Although Allan can't make her customers "look like Greta Garbo," she notes that the garment that makes the client "feel comfortable and good about herself" is regarded as a success.
